THE WAQFS OF SHAHIN AHMAD AGHA¹

Hamza 'ABD AL-'AZİZ BADR

Daniel CRECELIUS

INTRODUCTION

The waqfiyya of this endowed sabil-kuttab refers to its donor, Shahin Ahmad Agha, as 'ayn a'yan (chief agha) of the dar al-sa'ada in Istanbul. The document also refers to him by other titles affiliated with this position, such as khass khulasat al-khawwas al-mu'tabirin, mu'tamid al-muluk, mu'tamid al-salatin, anis al-dawla al-'uthmaniyya, and jalis al-maqamat al-khaqaniyya.² It is clear, therefore, that Shahin Ahmad Agha was working as ra'is rijala al-khidma (chief servant) in the imperial palace in Istanbul. These positions of service were held by black and white eunuchs, each group of which had its own organization and duties.³ The chief black eunuch was referred to as the kizlar aghasi (agha of the females), while the chief white eunuch held the title kapi aghasi or bab al-sa'ada aghasi (agha of the door). The relationship between these two groups of palace eunuchs began to change when Sultan Murad III appointed a black slave as aghat dar al-sa'ada in 1582.⁴ From that year to the end of the Ottoman Empire this position was held by black eunuchs and the influence of the white eunuchs declined in proportion to the growing power of the black eunuchs.

The chief agha of the palace became a powerful person within the palace; upon his promotion he was granted sable furs in the presence of the sultan himself.⁵ The influence of these chief black aghas increased considerably from the beginning of the seventeenth century to the middle of the eighteenth century. Some even participated in the deposition and appointment of grand wazirs.⁶

The dar al-sa'ada aghas were also appointed as supervisors of the awqaf (pious endowments) of the haramayn al-sharifayn, the two holy shrines in Mecca and Medina, and from 1128/1716 the awqaf al-salatin in Cairo were assigned to them. They also acquired supervision of awqaf for which the sultans were originally responsible. This situation continued until 1250/1834 when the directorate of the awqaf al-haramayn was created during the tanzimat period. In 1252/1836 the directorate became a ministry (nizara) and terminated the agha-s' supervision of these awqaf.

The black eunuchs were recruited originally in Africa south of the Sahara. They were brought as slaves to Egypt, where the necessary operation was performed on a selected few. Many of these were then presented to the sultan by the governor of Egypt.⁷ Upon their retirements or deposition they were frequently sent back to Egypt or were assigned pensions from Egyptian sources. This explains the close relationship between this group of palace agha-s and their residence in Cairo to supervise the awqaf of the sultans and the haramayn al-sharifayn.

In Cairo these aghas, like other Ottoman officials, undertook numerous constructions; the sabil-kuttab for teaching orphans the principles of reading and writing from the Qur'an was particularly popular among them and they endowed numerous buildings and extensive agricultural lands to support these pious foundations. Many of the buildings constructed by these agha-s still exist to recall their connection with Egypt. Some of these agha-s built their own tombs inside their monuments. Among the constructions of these aghas in Cairo is the sabil-kuttab, house and mausoleum built by Yusuf Agha al-Habashi in 1013/1604 (monument number 229), but the most important structure erected by the agha-s of the dar al-sa'ada is the mosque known as al-Malika Safiyya (monument number 200) in al-Da'udiyya, which is the second mosque constructed in Cairo in the Ottoman style. This mosque, erected in 1019/1610, is a multi-unit mosque resembling the mosque of Üç Çorfalli in Edirne. It was constructed by 'Uthman Agha ibn 'Abdallah, agha aghat dar al-sa'ada, who was the slave of al-Malika Safiyya, the wife of Sultan Murad III and the mother of Sultan Muhammad Khan III. André Raymond saw a connection between the transfer of the old tanneries in Khatt Qusun and the erection of the Malika Safiyya mosque, the 'Amir mosque and the Bardini mosque in the cleared area.⁸

Also among the constructions of these agha-s are the sabil-kuttab of Mustafa Agha Dar al-Sa'ada in Siyufiyya street,⁹ the sabil-kuttab of 'Abbas Agha Dar al-Sa'ada in Harat al-Alfi,¹⁰ and another sabil-kuttab built by Yusuf Agha Kizlar Dar al-Sa'ada, another agha from Ethiopia, in Tabbana Street.¹¹ Yusuf Agha Kizlar also constructed a wikala which no longer exists next to his sabil-kuttab and a large residence in the same area in Suwayqat Asfur in which Hamza Pasha resided after his deposition in 1098/1686.¹² After his service in Istanbul 'Abdallah Agha Dar al-Sa'ada came to Cairo to supervise the awqaf al-haramayn in Egypt. He constructed many buildings around Cairo and a mausoleum for himself in Cairo for which he arranged to have the Qur'an intoned by ten reciters. Although his constructions no longer exist, their descriptions can be found in his waqf document.¹³ Mustafa Agha Dar al-Sa'ada, 'Abbas Agha and Bashir Agha Dar al-Sa'ada all built *sabil-kuttab*s in Cairo between 1689-1719.¹⁴ 'Ali Agha Khazindar Dar al-Sa'ada also erected a sabil-kuttab in Siyufiyya Street in 1088/1677.¹⁵ Next to it he built a basin for watering animals and 15 shops to help support his sabil-kuttab, but neither the basin nor the shops exist any longer.¹⁶

In the eighteenth century we find that 'Uthman Agha Dar al-Sa'ada constructed a large mosque above the tomb of Sidi al-Bayyumi in the Husayniyya district outside Bab al-Futuh.¹⁷ 'Uthman Agha built this mosque in 1180/1766 and adjoined to it a sabil-kuttab and mausoleum.¹⁸ The inscriptions above the two entrances of the mosque

bear the name of 'Uthman Agha and identify him as the retainer of Bashir Agha Dar al-Sa'ada.

Among the aghas who came to Egypt in the nineteenth century were Sulayman Agha, the former wakil dar al-sa'ada. He was given an imperial salary from the budget of the Cairo mint in the substantial amount of 1000 nisf fiddas per day, so he was able to endow many awqaf described in his waqfiyya dated 1263/1836. Sulayman Agha also constructed a sabil and a mausoleum for himself in the eastern cemetery of Cairo and endowed money for several mausoleums of religious saints in Cairo.¹⁹ Bashir Agha, already cited above, also built a sabil-kuttab of his own in 1131/1718.

In some cases some of these aghas mismanaged the awqaf under their supervision and usurped their revenues, whereupon the sultan issued *firman*s to seize their property. For instance, the property of Yusuf Agha, aghat al-banat, was seized in 1099/1687.²⁰ Probably as a result of this mismanagement, in 1103/1691 the sultan issued a firman that the supervision of the awqaf al-haramayn al-sharifayn and the awqaf al-dashisha was to be given to four sanjaqs beys.²¹

The number of the dar al-sa'ada aghas who settled in Egypt was large. Many of them seemed to have resided in the Qusun district around the Birkat al-Fil, which was a prestige area for the aristocracy. One of the streets of this area was even known as Darb al-Aghawat (Street of the Aghas) until the end of the eighteenth century.²² They were also a large enough distinctive body that they were invited as a separate group to special functions, such as the celebration to which the mubashir awqaf dar al-sa'ada invited them, and which Ahmad Shalabi described.²³ The size and influence of this group of dar al-sa'ada aghas is also affirmed by the information from Shahin Ahmad Agha's waqfiyya, for we find six of the witnesses are aghas. They played an official role at public celebrations, such as those associated with Wafa' al-Nil, and socialized with the governor, the sanjaq beys and the 'ulama'. They were also a significant political force in the politics of Cairo and often played a mediating role between the mamluk amirs and the governor.

The document which is the subject of this study is a waqfiyya dated 1086/1675. It endows a sabil-kuttab and a large residence on lands belonging to other awqaf. Shahin Agha, who had the right of khulu (see below), cleared the first site and constructed his sabil-kuttab. This document describes the construction as having a marble floor, grilled brass windows and a marble basin for offering water to the public. He included as part of his endowment 75 feddans of good agricultural land in addition to his salary from the imperial slaughterhouse in Cairo. The total income of the first waqf is 31,005 nisf fiddas annually, which enabled his waqf to pay for the following expenses of his sabil-kuttab :

Item	nisf fiddas annually
Water for the cistern	2,400
Muzammalat	600
Equipment for the cistern	450
Supervisor of the waqf	3,600
Clerk for the waqf	1,800
Shadd for the waqf	360
Rent collector for the waqf	360
Shaykh to instruct the students.	720
Assistant to the shaykh	360
Expenses for 10 orphans	1,800
Bread for the orphans and instructors	1,800
Clothes for the orphans and employees	1,200
	<hr/> 15,450

The surplus was first to be used to maintain the sabil-kuttab, then was to be distributed according to the stipulations contained in the document.

Shahin Ahmad Agha tried through his stipulations to ensure that after his death his waqf would not fall into the hands of the mamluks by asserting that the supervision would pass to his freed slaves, then to the nazir of the haramayn al-sharifayn, who was, like himself, an agha sent from Istanbul.²⁴

In the year following the recording of his first waqfiyya Shahin Ahmad Agha added his newly constructed residence to his original waqf. This was a large house whose northern facade and many of its rooms overlooked the Birkat al-Fil. This second document does not give the dimensions of his house which no longer exists, but there is no doubt that it was very large, for it included a garden of fruit trees and flowers, a well and water wheel, and had a stable for 20 horses.²⁵

It is clear from Ahmad Shalabi that this house was still in good condition and suitable as a residence for the governors up to 1150/1737. He noted that the amir akhur Mustafa was appointed governor of Egypt and that when he arrived in Cairo on Thursday, 5 Dhu al-Qa'da, 1149/7 March 1737, the qa'immaqam presented him and his 20 companions with qaftans and settled him in the house of Shahin Ahmad Agha in Qusun. He stayed there for 25 days, going to the diwan on the appointed days. The celebrations for Mustafa Pasha were held in Shahin Agha's house.²⁶

It seems that a large number of the houses which the aghas constructed were grouped around the Birkat al-Fil. These residences were quite large and suitable as residences for the governors, as Ahmad Shalabi stated in the events of 1099/1687 when

Hamza Pasha was deposed and brought down to the house of Yusuf Agha in Suwayqat Asfur.²⁷ He also said that on Wednesday, 16 Rajab, 1122/10 September 1710, Ibrahim Pasha descended to the house of 'Abbas Agha in Harat Qusun which overlooked the Birkat al-Fil. In addition, on 18 Ramadan, 1147/12 February 1735 when the procession of Bakir Pasha arrived in Cairo coming from Jidda Ahmad Shalabi noted that the deposed 'Uthman Pasha was sent to the house of Salih Agha in Birkat al-Fil.²⁸

Unfortunately, only the sabil-kuttab and the facade of the house adjoining it remains of Shahin Ahmad Agha's constructions. The site of this house is today an open space used as a woodworking area. The building number is 31 Mukhtar Pasha Street.

BISMILLAH AL-RAHMAN AL-RAHIM

Praise be to Allah who facilitates for the one who asks for His generosity; He guides him to the noblest of deeds. He blesses the one who devotes himself [2] to what is pleasing (to Allah). He leads him to the highest ranks. He leads the one who is on the generous side (of Allah). He knows what bounty (Allah) has bestowed on him, so he (in turn) gives generously. He gives to Allah from His own assets. He supports his faithfulness in his worship, so he secures his highest aim. Allah bless and grant salvation to the most perfect of his creations, our lord Muhammad, the chosen (al-Mustafa), the lord of the Arabs and the non-Arabs, the one in whom is gathered all types of perfections, and the noblest of descendants, the one who with determination (succeeds) in the field of combat against those who are unjust and corrupt, [3] the one who has been sent as a guide to the peoples of the world, a guide to what is required, having the best descriptions in the revealed holy books. Every sermon of every khatib falls short (in describing him). Eternal blessings on his family and companions, who are the guides of Truth in the congregations of those who attract people to Allah and who are protectors of man in the places of those who are afraid (of Allah), the ones who obtain victory in the East and the West without being fatigued, for as long as the Qur'an is recited and as long as it is remembered, or as long as mutaqarribs draw near to it. Whoever asks (of Allah) succeeds, as long as day follows night, as long as stars shine after sunset.

The aim of every thought [4] of a wise person and the highest idea of every wise man is to consider his end. He thinks about his last judgment and what (deeds) he will bring in his hands before (Allah). In the Holy Book of Allah the distinction of the givers of alms is made clear. Allah says in his noble book, "Who is it that will lend unto Allah a goodly loan, that He may double it for him, and his may be a rich reward?" [Qur'an, Sura LVII, 11]. And when the person who knows that the people who give charitable gifts (sadaqat) are carried to the pinnacle of pleasure and the highest rank, they remain with Allah, praising and invoking His name. They remain [5] with Him to the last day, benefitting and accumulating (good). (The donor) immediately complied with Allah's directive in the noble Qur'anic verses and attempted to fulfill the sayings of the noble verses and the Prophet's hadith,²⁹ embracing its magnificent effects, following its orders and teachings.

(In) the clear words of (Muhammad), Allah bless him and grant him salvation, "If a person dies, his work will cease, except for three things: continuous almsgiving, or the knowledge that he taught something beneficial, or a good son to ask blessings on him."³⁰ For that is one of the best of good works whose traces are not erased. He wished that Allah would take [6] us with Him in the best path and that Allah would protect him from evil and peril through the protection of noble angels. (He is) our master the donor mentioned below.

This is an authentic and legal waqf; it must be considered true and must be obeyed. Its witnesses issued and wrote it down in the noble and highest shar' council and most brilliant and exalted religious assembly, having strong roots in the shar' court, immaculate, satisfying in protected Cairo, in Qusun mosque,³¹ may Allah preserve it. In the presence of its supervisor (mutawalli), our lord and master, [7] the most magnificent of the sadah al-ashraf (descendants of the Prophet), the chosen of the descendants of 'Abd Manaf, having noble descent, chosen of the descendants of Bani Hashim, the great lord, the noble expert trusted by Allah, our master al-Sayyid 'Abd al-Rahman Efendi, the Hanafi judge, who will sign above.³² May Allah the most high continue to keep him exalted. May Allah be merciful with his fate for the sake of Muhammad and his family. Amen.

29. Stories of what the Prophet Muhammad did or said which were related by his companions form one of the most important sources for Islamic law.

30. This saying of the Prophet can be found in Muhammad ibn 'Ali ibn Muhammad al-Shawkani, Nayl al-Awtar (Cairo: 1347 A.H.), Vol. VI, 18. See also Ibn Hajar al-Hafiz ibn Hajar al-'Askalani, Bulugh al-Maram min Adillat al-Ahkam (Mecca: Maktabat al-Nahda al-Haditha, 1373 A.H.), 210.

31. The Jami' al-Qusun, situated outside the Bab Zuwayla, was begun by the amir Qusun, one of the amirs of Sultan al-Nasir Muhammad ibn Qala'un, in 730 A.H./1329 A.D. The Mahkamat Bab al-Jami' al-Qusun was one of the shari'a courts in Cairo during the Ottoman period. On Cairo's shari'a court system, see Galal el-Nahal, The Judicial Administration of Ottoman Egypt in the Seventeenth Century (Minneapolis and Chicago: Bibliotheca Islamica, 1979). The mosque was damaged through the centuries and was demolished when the Khedive Isma'il had Muhammad 'Ali Street built in 1873. At that time a smaller mosque was constructed on part of its former site. See Ahmad ibn 'Ali al-Maqrizi, Kitab al-Mawa'ith wa al-I'tibar bi Dhikr al-Khitat wa al-Athar (Beirut: Dar Sadir, no date), Vol. II, 307; 'Abd al-Rahman Zaki, Mawsu'at Madinat al-Qahira (Cairo: Anglo-Egyptian Bookshop, 1987), 328.

32. This qadi remains unknown.

The following was recorded in the presence of the (following) magnificent amirs. The support of the great ones, the amir possessing mamluks, his excellency the amir Hasan Agha,³³ the former katkhuda of the Jawishiyya³⁴ in Cairo, [8] the present supervisor (mutahaddith) for the district of Balfiyya whose iqta' is in the province of al-Bahnasawiyya;³⁵ his excellency, the most magnificent of the excellent ones, the amir Hasan Agha,³⁶ former *mi'mar basha*³⁷ of Cairo, presently among the *ikhtiyariyya*³⁸ of the Mutafarriqa amirs³⁹ in the Diwan al-'Ali in Cairo; his excellency, the most magnificent of their highnesses, the amir Ahmad Agha,⁴⁰ the most noble of the Mutafarriqa amirs in the diwan of Cairo, who is known as the follower of the deceased Yaqut Agha Dar al-Sa'ada;⁴¹ the most magnificent of the grandees (a'yan), having importance, our master Mustafa Agha,⁴² one of the Mutafarriqa amirs in the diwan;

33. As head of the Nisf Sa'd political faction in Cairo Hasan Agha Balfiyya was one of the most powerful political leaders of the late seventeenth century. See Ahmad Katkhuda 'Azaban al-Damurdashi, al-Durra al-Musana fi Akhbar al-Kinana (The Chronicle of Egypt, 1688-1755), translated and annotated by Daniel Crecelius and 'Abd al-Wahhab Bakr (Leiden: 1991), 33-35; 42; 59-60; 62; 71-75; etc.; Ahmad Shalabi ibn 'Abd al-Ghani, Awdah al-Isharat, 178-179. He held an iltizam in the village of Balfiyya, in Bahnasa province, by which he was identified. He died in 1117 (1705-1706). See al-Damurdashi, 126.

34. This smaller corps, one of the seven Ottoman garrison regiments, served the governor, guarded the meetings of the diwan, collected the taxes owed to the treasury by the countryside, and delivered messages from the governor or the diwan to their recipients anywhere in Egypt. See Huseyn Efendi, Ottoman Egypt in the Age of the French Revolution, translated by Stanford J. Shaw (Cambridge: 1964), 87-89.

35. Bahnasa is one of the provinces of Upper Egypt.

36. This amir remains unidentified.

37. The mi'mar bashi supervised and taxed all building activities in Cairo and its vicinity. Since 1599 it was a position controlled by the Mutafarriqa regiment, one of the seven Ottoman corps representing Ottoman power in Egypt. See Shaw, French Revolution, 85-86. Although he collected over 1,000,000 nisf fiddas a year by 1765, he had to deliver to the government only 51,794 nisf fiddas as the price for his position. See Stanford J. Shaw, The Financial and Administrative Organization and Development of Ottoman

Egypt, 1517-1798 (Princeton: 1962), 147; 193.

38. The ikhtiyariyya were the senior officers of each of the Ottoman corps. They represented the interests of their corps to the government and helped to settle internal disputes within the corps. See Stanford J. Shaw, Nizamname-i Misir (Cambridge: 1962), 30-31; Shaw, French Revolution, 83.

39. The Mutafarriqa corps was a smaller regiment whose chief function was to guard the forts on Egypt's borders. In Cairo it served as the personal corps of the governor, so it was composed primarily of men sent from Istanbul. One of its principal officers was the mi'mar bashi. See Shaw, French Revolution, 84-87.

40. The identity of this amir remains uncertain.

41. The dar al-sa'ada (abode of felicity) refers to the palace of the Ottoman Sultan in Istanbul where the corps of black (and white) eunuchs (aghas) served. High ranking aghas from this group were sent to Egypt to administer the Mamluk and Ottoman awqaf controlled by the government on behalf of the haramayn al-sharifayn in the Hijaz. See Ahmad al-Sa'id Sulayman, Ta'sil ma warada fi Ta'rikh al-Jabarti min al-Dakhil, 18-19.

42. The Mustafa Agha referred to here appears to be the famous Mustafa Agha, the mamluk of Hasan Agha Balfiyya. Upon the death of his master in 1117 (1705-1706), Mustafa Agha assumed the leadership of his master's faction ("he kept open his master's house") and was named commander of the Çerakise (Circassian) corps. He also assumed his master's iltizam in the village of Balfiyya, hence he was called Mustafa Agha Balfiyya. See al-Damurdashi, 126-127.

the most magnificent of the great ones, the chief support of the noble ones, [9] our master 'Abd al-Rahman Efendi,⁴³ son of our deceased master, Ja'far Efendi,⁴⁴ former katib (clerk) of the Jawishiyya in Cairo; his excellency, the amir 'Uthman Çorbaji⁴⁵ of the Çerakisa in Cairo; his excellency, the most magnificent of their highnesses, our master Hasan,⁴⁶ former efendi (scribe) of the Jawishiyya in Cairo and presently Turkish clerk (katib rumi)⁴⁷ of the waqf of the deceased Sultan Ahmad;⁴⁸ the most magnificent of the clerks (arbab al-aqlam), the support of accountants (arbab al-arqam), our master Sulayman Efendi,⁴⁹ the present accountant (muhasibci) in the Diwan al-'Ali in Cairo; the pride of the chosen aghas, our master Bashir Agha,⁵⁰ one of the aghas [10] of dar al-sa'ada; the pride of the great ones, support of the proud ones, our master Musa Agha,⁵¹ one of the Mutaferriqa amirs; the pride of the notables (a'yan), chief support of those having influence, the amir 'Ali,⁵² the katkhuda of our master ... Shahin Ahmad Agha, chief of the aghas of dar al-sa'ada;⁵³ ... the amir Yusuf,⁵⁴ the khazindar of our master the above-mentioned Shahin Ahmad Agha. May their standing increase.

43. The identity of this clerk remains uncertain.

44. This clerk cannot be clearly identified.

45. This amir cannot be identified with certainty.

46. This Hasan Efendi could be the famous Hasan Efendi al-Damurdashi, who went on to enjoy an illustrious career in Egypt. See al-Damurdashi, 12; 31; 48-51; 58-61; 63-64; etc.

47. The administration carried on its work in both Arabic and Turkish. The Rumi clerk was responsible for issuing documents in Turkish.

48. This waqf was among the large awqaf endowed by Mamluk and Ottoman sultans on behalf of the haramayn. Shaw's claim that this endowment was made by Sultan Ahmad II (1691-1695) is clearly in error since this waqf is mentioned in this document of 1675. It appears to have been established by Sultan Ahmad I (1603-1617). The Ottomans tried to maintain control of these lucrative endowments by sending their supervisors from Istanbul. Other large imperial awqaf were the Muhammadiyya, established by Sultan Mehmed IV (1648-1687); the Muradiyya (or Dashisha al-Sughra), established by Sultan Murad III in 1583; the Dashisha al-Kubra, which united all the awqaf endowed by the Mamluk sultans Çakmak and Qa'itbey and the mamluk amirs Tamam and Kha'und. It was added to by Sultans Selim I (1512-1520) and Sulayman al-Qanuni (1520-1566), and Murad III; and the haramayn which combined a number of small awqaf from the Mamluk/Ottoman periods. See Shaw, French Revolution, 154-156.

49. This clerk has not been identified.

50. Bashir Agha was one of the aghas of the dar al-sa'ada from Istanbul who came to Cairo to supervise the awqaf of the haramayn in Egypt. He became one of the most powerful aghas in Cairo in the late 17th and early 18th centuries. He constructed and endowed numerous structures in Cairo, but only a sabil-kuttab in Bushtak Street, for which he endowed many buildings and agricultural lands, remains. He received an imperial firman at the end of Dhu al-Qa'da, 1128/November 1716, appointing him agha of the females of the imperial harim in Istanbul. See his waqfiyya, Document 2697, in the daftar-khana of the Ministry of Awqaf in Cairo. See also Ahmad Shalabi, Awdah al-Isharat, 289.

51. Musa Agha is mentioned in the events of 1100/1688 when he was asked to deliver a letter from the Cairo diwan to the government in Istanbul. See Ahmad Shalabi, Awdah al-Isharat, 184.

52. This amir is probably the 'Ali Agha Khazindar Dar al-Sa'ada who erected a sabil-kuttab in Siyufiyya Street in 1088/1677. See ft. 15.

53. See the Introduction.

54. This amir is most probably the Yusuf Agha Kizlar who built his own sabil-kuttab in Tabbana Street. See fts 11, 12.

When [11] our master Shahin Ahmad Agha acquired all the *makan*⁵⁵ located in the environs of Cairo, outside the two gates of Zuwayla and al-Kharq⁵⁶ in the district of the old tanneries (al-Madabigh al-Qadima)⁵⁷ near the secondary door of the Qusun mosque facing the renovated oven in the open area and the street heading towards the Da'udiyya mosque,⁵⁸ it included (the following), according to the legal document issued from this court on 11 Jumada al-Akhira 1077/9 December 1666.

In its facade, which was constructed with red bricks, is a rectangular door leading to a corridor which has a staircase leading to [12] two rooms (tabaqatayn). One of them faces the street; the second faces inward. It included the right of benefits. It is described by four boundaries. The southern one ends at the house of Mu'allim Nasir al-Adami; the northern one ends at the main street in which the facade and the door are found; the eastern boundary ends at the house of al-Zayni Kaywan; the western boundary ends at the house of the above-mentioned Mu'allim Nasir al-Adami.

It included all the benefits of the *khulu*⁵⁹ of the makan adjoining the above-mentioned makan, according to the document of khulu issued also from this court on [13] the 11th of Jumada al-Akhira 1077. It includes a hall on the ground floor and a small court between the doors, the benefits and rights of which are within four boundaries. The southern one ends at the house of Muhammad Abu Qura; the northern one ends at the house of Muhammad Muta'farriqa; the eastern boundary ends at the above-mentioned makan; the western one also ends at the house of Muhammad Abu Qura.

55. In waqf documents the term makan has a rather elastic meaning. It refers to "a place," that is, a plot of land on which a structure is built, but can also refer to a building of practically any size, such as a residence.

56. The Bab Zuwayla was the principal gate in the southern wall of the original city of Cairo built by the Fatimids in the tenth century. The Bab al-Kharq was the gate at the southwestern corner of the original Fatimid wall, at the point where the street Taht al-Rab' running along this southern wall hit the main canal of Cairo. See André Raymond, Artisans et Commerçants au Caire au XVIII^e Siècle (Damascus: 1973), Vol. I, 214; 260; 311-315.

57. When the old tanneries were moved to the western side of Cairo's canal at Bab al-Luq the area they had previously occupied became available for housing. It quickly became one of the prestige residential districts in the area between the Sultan Hasan mosque and Bab Zuwayla. See Raymond, Artisans et Commerçants, Vol. I, 327-328.

58. The Da'udiyya mosque (Monument No. 472 on the Cairo map), situated in Suwayqat al-Lala Street, was constructed by Da'ud Pasha, the governor of Egypt, between 945-955/1538-1548. The inscription plaque above its entrance carries the date of 961 AH in sentences, which is six years after his death, but the historian al-Ishaqi said that Da'ud Pasha constructed a great mosque in Suwayqat Lala and endowed it generously. See 'Ali Mubarak, al-Khitat al-Tawfiqiyya al-Jadida (Cairo: 1980), Vol. 4, 230; 'Abd al-Rahman Zaki, Mawsu'at Madinat al-Qahira, 308.

59. Khulu gave to the renter some rights of ownership to property he built on endowed land or when he added to existing endowed buildings. The supervisor or founder of a waqf could not expel from the property anyone having the right of Khulu. The person having the right of khulu could sell or pass it to his heirs. Because the Maliki madhhab gave particularly strong rights to the holders of khulu most cases involving khulu were contested before Maliki judges. See Muhammad 'Afifi, al-Awqaf wa al-Hayah al-Iqtisadiyya fi Misr fi al-'Asr al-'Uthmani (Cairo: Silsilat Ta'rikh al-Misriyyin, 1991), 167-173.

These are its boundaries which are known to our master Shahin Agha (and form) the legal description.

All that became the private property of our master Shahin Ahmad Agha, (including the right) of disposal. [14] The document whose date is mentioned above certified that. The second makan mentioned is part of the waqf of the deceased Nasir al-Din ibn al-Hilal al-Adami and his wife, the deceased Shahiyya, and became part of the khulu of our master Shahin Ahmad Agha. The second document mentioned above certified that.

Our master Shahin Ahmad Agha undertook to level all of the above-mentioned two makans and to clear all the land. He then brought suitable tools and quality materials, such as lime, gypsum, stones, bricks, marble [15] tiles, wood of different kinds, and others suitable materials for that purpose. (He also brought) architects, masons, laborers, carpenters, tilemen, marble workers, plumbers, painters and others.

He constructed a *sahrij*⁶⁰ to provide drinking water to the public. Above that sahrij (he constructed) a *kuttab*⁶¹ for educating children and for Qur'an recitation. The northern facade of that sahrij is constructed of newly hewn red stone. It has a rectangular doorway closed with two nice wooden leaves whose door handles are circular. This doorway leads to four steps and a landing (basta) which [16] on its left side has a door leading to the muzammala.⁶² Its floor is done in colored marble. It has a marble basin into which water is poured. It has a window of engraved (latticed) brass. There are cabinets in the muzammala, which is roofed in fine wood in the Syrian style and decorated in gold and blue, as is customary.

Beside the door of the muzammala is another door leading to the covering lid of the sahrij. Inside is a large basin of red stone to hold water. From the landing one reaches an arched staircase of kiddan tile⁶³ leading to the maktab. (That maktab) has two arches [17] which are supported by a white marble column and a balustrade of solid wood. It faces the street above the window of the sahrij. It has a wooden awning above the two arches and is roofed in solid wood, which is painted red. Next to (the maktab) is a toilet for the children.

In the facade is another doorway with a Roman arch made of newly hewn red stone. It is closed with two leaves of solid wood. It leads to a small corridor having a small landing beside which is a staircase taking one up to a room that has one window

60. The sahrij, or cistern, stored water below a sabil, or fountain, to which it was usually connected by a mouth or hole in the floor of the latter. It was usually built of brick and water resisting stone. The sahrij was roofed by shallow domes supported by pillars and arches of cut stone. In the Ottoman period the term sahrij was usually used to include the whole construction of the sahrij and sabil. See Mahmud al-Husayni, al-Asbila al-'Uthmaniyya, 349.

61. The kuttab was the primary school of the Muslim community for teaching students the fundamentals of reading and writing. It was often an open, double-arched chamber over a sabil.

62. Lane's lexicon lists muzammala as "a certain thing in which water is cooled." In this case it is the lower area where water was stored and cooled (for human consumption). See Edward Lane, An Arabic-English Lexicon (reprint Beirut: 1968).

63. Kiddan tile is a form of gray marble found in Egypt and used extensively, even today, as a paving tile in buildings.

facing the street. Next to the window [18] is a toilet. The staircase also leads to a *riwaq*⁶⁴ which has a sleeping room and four cabinets and a window overlooking the street. Above it is another window. Beside it is a kitchen and toilet. The rest of the staircase leads to the roof. On the roof is a sleeping room and toilet. Around it is a balastrade.

Everything there was completed with doors, awnings, cabinets, and solid plastered walls. The benefits (manafi') and facilities, as well as its rights, belong to our master Shahin Ahmad Agha in a legal manner.

All [19] the aforementioned construction is the private property of our master Shahin Ahmad Agha, which he built anew with his own funds as the above-mentioned person witnessed.

The agent (wakil) of our master Shahin Ahmad Agha, who is his katkhuda, the amir 'Ali, whose representation is official as the above-mentioned witnesses testify, certified that he is in good health, of sound mind, and freely chooses, [20] wanting to do good, according to the agency mentioned above. He certifies that (Shahin Ahmad Agha) endowed all of the building mentioned above and the construction of the sahrij and maktab. He provided for the functions of the sahrij and maktab (by endowing) all of the (first) makan mentioned above, and all of 40 *feddans*⁶⁵ of *utlaq*⁶⁶ recorded for the district of Shubramint, and all of 35 feddans recorded for the district of Talibiyya, all of which are in the province of Ghiza, and all of the benefit of the salary allowance (badal al-murattab) granted [21] to the *shehr muqata'at*⁶⁷ in the Sultan's slaughterhouse.⁶⁸ All these are under the supervision and authority of our master Shahin Ahmad Agha, according to the diwani permits (tazakir) signed and stamped in the usual manner. The permits for the utlaq of the 35 feddans are dated to the ninth of this month (Shawwal 1086/27 December 1675) and the permit for the utlaq of the 40 feddans is dated to the fourteenth of Jumada al-Ula of this year mentioned below (6 August 1675).

64. The term riwaq was used to describe an area including two iwans and the durr qa'a between them, which was usually a place of residence. It was also the term used for the corridor between two iwans. See 'Abd al-Rahman Zaki, Mawsu'at Madinat al-Qahira, 116; Mahmud al-Husayni, al-Asbila al-'Uthmaniyya, 345.

65. The feddan was the largest unit of land measurement. It was divided into smaller units called qassabas, the number of which varied according to the quality of the land being taxed. See Shaw, French Revolution, 170-171.

66. Utlaq was pasture or grassland. In Ottoman terminology it referred to the tax exempt lands allocated to produce fodder for the horses of the governor, his retainers, high officials and sanjaq beys. See Layla 'Abd al-Latif Ahmad, al-Idara, 351-352.

67. In this case the shehr muqata'at were those urban tax farms (muqata'at) organized around the functioning of the slaughterhouse just outside Bab al-Futuh in Cairo. See Shaw, French Revolution, 140.

68. The imperial slaughterhouse, which was located outside Bab al-Futuh, was controlled by the Janissaries from the beginning of the 17th century. Its multazim received a tax on each animal slaughtered there and also claimed the right to sell the skins for his own account. He paid a kushufiyya saghir of meat valued at 375,000 nisf fiddas annually to the governor in addition to a sum of 46,000 nisf fiddas annually as kushufiyya kabir. See Layla 'Abd al-Latif Ahmad, al-Idara, 189-190; Shaw Organization, 149.

The total derived from those feddans [22] and the salary amounts annually to 31,005 nisf fiddas.⁶⁹ From the 40 feddans come 3,320 nisf fiddas. The income from each feddan is 83 nisf fiddas. The income of the 35 feddans is 2,485 nisf fiddas. The income of each feddan is 71 [23] nisf fiddas. The salary allowed from the slaughterhouse is 25,200 nisf fiddas. The monthly income is 2,100 nisf fiddas and the daily income is 70 nisf fiddas in addition to the amount deducted for the multazim of the slaughterhouse, which is 30 nisf fiddas monthly, as is customary.

This is a legal waqf and provision. It cannot be sold, given away, mortgaged or exchanged, in whole or in part. It must remain [24] forever as it is, according to its stipulations, dedicated to the goals which will be described, until Allah inherits the earth and everything in it, for He is the best of inheritors.

The agent described above established a waqf for the aforementioned (Shahin Ahmad Agha) in order to do good and as a means of drawing near (to Allah) without expecting a reward.⁷⁰ Every year there should be spent from the income of the waqf 2400 nisf fiddas to fill the sahrij up to its mouth with water from the Nile at the time of Tuba.⁷¹ There should be spent annually for the wages of the person responsible for the muzammala [25] 600 nisf fiddas, or 50 nisf fiddas monthly. There should be spent annually for the sahrij's equipment, for ropes, buckets, towels, jars, mugs, incense, sponges, brooms, and for emptying it every year (for cleaning), 450 nisf fiddas, that is, 37 1/4 nisf fiddas monthly.

There shall be spent for the salary of the supervisor of the waqf 3,600 [26] nisf fiddas annually, that is, 10 nisf fiddas daily. The salary of the clerk for the waqf shall be 1800 nisf fiddas annually, or 5 nisf fiddas daily. There shall be spent for the shadd and the jabi of the waqf 720 nisf fiddas annually. The shadd shall receive 360 nisf fiddas annually and the jabi shall receive 360 nisf fiddas annually, [27] that is, 30 nisf fiddas monthly.⁷²

The teacher (mu'addib) of the children shall receive 720 nisf fiddas annually, that is, 60 nisf fiddas monthly. The assistant ('arif al-atfal) will receive 360 nisf fiddas annually, that is, 30 nisf fiddas monthly. There shall be spent for 10 young orphans who will study in the maktab from sunrise to the 'asr prayer, [28] except for Friday

69. Nisf fidda was the colloquial Egyptian term for the official Ottoman silver para. Nisf fiddas, or paras were grouped into purses (kis, akyas). The Egyptian "purse" equalled 25,000 nisf fiddas. Forty nisf fiddas equalled one qirsh (piaster). See Raymond, Artisans et Commerçants, Vol. I, 34-35.

70. It appears, therefore, that Shahin Agha was not present in Cairo when his awqaf were created.

71. Many waqf documents stipulate that the sahrij was to be filled once a year during the Coptic month of Tuba, for this was the period when the Nile waters were the most free of sediment.

72. The supervisor of a waqf was the chief administrator responsible for the waqf's wellbeing and for the disbursement of its benefits. The day-to-day activities of the waqf were carried out by a number of officials under his authority. The mubashir kept the accounts. The shadd supervised the activities of the workers. The jabi collected rents belonging to the waqf. On the administrators serving awqaf see Muhammad Muhammad Amin, al-Awqaf wa al-Hayah al-Ijtima'iyya fi Misr: 648-923/1250-1517 (Cairo: 1980), 303-320.

of every week, the sum of 1800 nisf fiddas, that is, each orphan will receive 180 nisf fiddas annually, or 15 nisf fiddas monthly. Whenever any of them reaches adulthood he shall be dismissed and another enrolled in his place.

There shall be a daily disbursement for the price of cakes of bread, for 40 well baked raghifs, the weight of each raghif being half a ratl. [29] For the teacher, four raghifs; for the assistant, three raghifs; for the muzammalati, three raghifs; for the 10 orphans, 30 raghifs, that is, for each orphan three raghifs. The amount (spent) for that bread annually shall be 1800 nisf fiddas, that is, five nisf fiddas daily.

There shall be spent for the orphans, the teacher, and for the assistant (to buy) Manzalawi cloth, rough cotton cloth from Tanan, white and clean, for thin white cotton cloth (bafta shami), for the white cotton skullcaps and scarves, [30] the sum of 1200 nisf fiddas annually, that is, for each orphan, for Manzalawi cloth and undergarments, for bafta, for scarves, and skullcaps, in the sufficient amount as is customary.

There shall be spent for the *hikr*⁷³ of the above-mentioned empty plot, paid to its waqf, the annual sum of 36 nisf copper (coins), or 27 nisf fiddas.

Whatever remains from the income of the waqf after all expenditures (have been made) shall be spent for the waqf itself and its maintenance and welfare. The donor shall supervise [31] his waqf during his lifetime, may Allah grant him a good and long life. After his death (this surplus) shall be distributed to his freed slaves, both male and female equally, that is, the males and females equally, then after their deaths to their descendants, generation after generation.⁷⁴ If one of them dies, having left a son or grandson, his share shall go to his son, [32] or his grandson, or great-grandson. But if he has no son or grandson, his share will go to one of equal rank. If all of them perish and death overcomes them all, and none of them exists any longer anywhere on earth, the surplus of the waqf after the above-mentioned expenses and maintenance are paid shall be given as benefit to the haramayn al-sharifayn, that is, the noble sanctuary of Mecca al-Mukarrama and the noble sanctuary of Medina al-Munawwara, whose master (is Muhammad), may Allah bless him and grant him salvation. If it is impossible to spend on one of them, the amount will go to the other. If it is impossible to spend on either of them, may Allah not allow that, [33] it shall be distributed to the poor and unfortunate in any place, or wherever they are found, as the supervisor thinks best.

The agent stipulated on behalf of the donor the stipulations written here and affirmed that they must be obeyed. Among them, (the donor) stipulated that the supervision

73. Hikr is the long term lease of waqf property, usually for a large down payment and small annual rents. The lease may run for 99 lunar years, at which time it can be renewed. A tenant may build on leased waqf land and the new construction becomes his to bequeath or sell. The land, however, always remains part of the original waqf, unless it is exchanged. See “Wakf” in the Encyclopaedia of Islam.

74. In making this stipulation, which is very common in such awqaf from Egypt, the donor stipulated that his male and female slaves would share equally. This waqf device became a major method to get around those Islamic inheritance laws that assigned women only half the share of men.

and responsibility for this waqf shall be his during his lifetime. May Allah grant him a long life. The donor has the right to add people to it, to change agents or executors, giving (these functions) to whomever he wishes whenever he wishes. [34] He also stipulated the right to add to or subtract (from the waqf), to change it or alter it during his lifetime. After his death no one has the right to make changes in it. After him, the supervision and executorship of the waqf will go to the eldest, then the next eldest, of the freed slaves of the donor, then to their sons or grandsons or descendants, generation after generation, as explained before. When they all perish, the supervision of the waqf [35] and its executorship shall be given to the current supervisor of the (awqaf of) al-haramayn al-sharifayn in Cairo.⁷⁵

He stipulated that appointment to the aforementioned positions shall be the right of the supervisor of the waqf, now and forever. The prime responsibility of the supervisor is to preserve the waqf, to maintain and prolong it, and to increase its income, even if he has to spend all the waqf's income (to achieve that).

After all this was completed the donor released his ownership of his waqf [36] and transferred the supervision and its executorship to a legal supervisor (mutawalli) who would manage its income and expenditures. The supervisor confirmed that he received it free of anything that would make its transfer illegal. It occurred to the agent that the donor wanted to withdraw the waqfiyya and to reclaim the property on the basis that it is not binding according to the saying of the imam Abu Hanifa al-Nu'man.⁷⁶ [37] The supervisor countered that the waqf is binding according to the sayings of the two imams Abi Yusuf and Muhammad ibn Hasan (al-Shaybani).⁷⁷ They disputed that at length before our master the shar' judge and both of them asked what the noble law required in this regard. He agreed (to consider the question) and after much thought undertook an unequivocal position in the dispute. He found (in matters) relating [38] to waqf strong support and an obvious preponderance (of facts); it was proved to him that what had been attributed by the agent of the donor relating to the waqf

75. Since the supervisor of the awqaf in Egypt belonging to the haramayn was an agha sent from Istanbul, Shahin Ahmad Agha was hoping to keep the supervision of his waqf within this group of dar al-sa'ada aghas.

76. Abu Hanifa al-Nu'man ibn Thabit al-Kufi (80-150 A.H.) was the founder of the Hanafi madhhab, one of the four schools of Sunni interpretation of the religious law. See Ibn al-'Imad al-Hanbali, Shazarat al-Dhahab fi Akhbar Man Dhahab (Beirut : Dar al-Masira, 1979), Vol. I, 227-230; Encyclopaedia of Islam. The process described here was to test, or challenge, the waqf. When the judge declared it to be sound, the waqf was considered secure and could not be challenged again.

77. Abu Yusuf is the judge Ya'qub ibn Ibrahim ibn Habib al-Ansari (113-182 A.H.). Al-Shaybani is Muhammad ibn al-Hasan ibn Farqad (131-189 A.H.). Both were the most famous students of Abu Hanifa Nu'man and cofounders of the Hanafi school of fiqh. Abu Yusuf was the judge of Baghdad and the first to carry the title qadi al-quda (chief judge). Al-Shaybani was the judge of Raqqa during the period of Harun al-Rashid. See Ibn Qatlubgha Abu al-'Adl Zayn al-Din Qasim, Taj al-Tarajim fi Tabaqat al-Hanafiyya (Baghdad: 1962), 54; 81. See also Ibn al-'Imad, Shazarat al-Dhahab, Vol. I, 298, 321-322; Encyclopaedia of Islam.

and its stipulations, because they were properly issued according to the testimony of its witnesses, (is) legally binding, may Allah support his judgments, and that the waqf is sound and obligatory. [39] It is legally confirmed.

Knowing the difference of opinion among the noble imams, he made a legal judgment, then signed it in the legal manner and executed its legal conditions and legal requirements which are legal claims issued by (the judge) in the prescribed manner. He considered what had to be considered, so this waqf is completed, [40] its rules must be obeyed and it became one of Allah's laudable waqfs. (Allah) will defend it with His strength. No one who believes in Allah and the last day, who knows that he is going to his generous Lord, should try to change or abrogate it, or to void any part of it. Whoever does that will be wanted, and held to account by Allah. [41] He will be judged for his deed on the last day, the day in which Allah will be the judge among the worshippers, "The day when their excuse availeth not the evil-doers, and theirs is the curse, and theirs the ill abode." (Qur'an, Sura XL, 52) "And whoso changeth (the will) after he hath heard it — the sin thereof is only upon those who change it. Lo! Allah is Hearer, Knower." (Qur'an, Sura II, 181) But he who facilitates and prolongs its expenses, Allah will cool his bed and dictate his proof [42] and make his final resort and return safe. He will place him among the secure and joyful, the triumphant through Allah's mercy.

He testified all this himself on the blessed day of 10 Shawwal 1086 of the hijra of the Prophet, on him the best of blessings, [43] and upon his family and companions. There is no power and no strength save in Allah, His exalted majesty. Allah is the best and sufficient agent.

Ministry of Awqaf Document Number 1939

This is an authentic addition; it must be considered true and legal. [45] It was witnessed and recorded in the shari'a court of the mosque of al-Qusun in Cairo ... in the presence of ... [46] our master Ahmad Efendi,⁷⁸ the Hanafi shari'a judge whose signature is above. ... The following has been recorded. The wakil of ... our master [47] Shahin Ahmad Agha, the most illustrious of the aghas of dar al-sa'ada (in Istanbul), is ... the amir 'Ali Agha ibn 'Umar, one of the a'yan of the Mutafarriqa ... in the diwan of Cairo. His agency on behalf of our master Shahin Ahmad Agha is certified ... before our master the judge [48] by the witnesses, (who are) ... the amir Yusuf ibn 'Abdallah, from the ta'ifat (corps) of the Çerakise, the former khazindar of Shahin Ahmad Agha, and ... the amir 'Uthman,⁷⁹ the former *saqqa bashi*⁸⁰ for the poor pilgrims (sahaba) (on the charge) of our master Sultan Ahmad, the follower of our master Shahin Ahmad Agha. (These witnesses) legally certified that ('Ali Agha ibn 'Umar) is of sound mind and body and has free choice. [49] He freely chooses, on the basis of his representation (of Shahin Ahmad Agha) to endow all the building which has been newly constructed on the hikr land belonging to the waqf of the deceased Maghlabey al-Zardakash⁸¹ which is located in Khatt Qusun in the Aleppo Lane (Zuqaq Halab)⁸² next to the well and basins which are there, near to (50) the furnace of the women's bathhouse (hammam)⁸³ in the Qusun district. (This is) according to the legal document issued by this court and signed by our master Ahmad Efendi, the Hanafi shari'a judge mentioned above, and dated 6 Sha'ban 1087 (14 October 1676).

It includes a new eastern and northern facade of hewn red stone surmounted by a stone overhang which will support [51] two structures (makanayn) which will become part of this waqf (and will include) their benefits and what goes with that.

As noted in the previously mentioned document, its four boundaries are as follows. The southern boundary ends at the makan of the amir Sha'ban Agha al-Dughanji, the former *Mutafarriqa bashi*⁸⁴ in Cairo. The northern boundary ends at the lane [52] in

79. This amir remains unidentified.

80. The saqqa bashi was responsible for ensuring the water supply which the Sultan Ahmad waqf provided for the pilgrims accompanying the hajj caravan to the haramayn.

81. This individual cannot be identified.

82. Maqrizi, al-Khitat, Vol. II, 23, identifies this lane outside the Bab Zuwayla by the same name in his day. It was a residential area for soldiers.

83. André Raymond, "Les Bains Publics au Caire à la Fin du XVIII^e Siècle," An. Isl. VIII (1969), 136, notes that this hammam for women, known as the Hammam Qusun, no longer existed at the end of the eighteenth century.

84. The Mutafarriqa bashi was the chief officer in command of the Mutafarriqa corps. See ft. 39.

which this building stands. In this boundary is the facade and a door. The eastern boundary ends at the street. The western boundary ends at the residence of the amir 'Abd al-Rahman al-Asmar, known as the khazindar of the deceased Kan'an Bey, mir al-liwa',⁸⁵ the former qa'immaqam.⁸⁶ Concerning those boundaries and rights and details, everything is legally known.

(Also endowed) is all of a building in the Khatt al-Madabigh al-Qadima (street of the old tanneries)⁸⁷ inside Darb [53] al-Nuqqaliyyin⁸⁸ next to the mausoleum⁸⁹ known to have been constructed by Shahin Ahmad Agha ... and next to the residence of al-Hajj Futuh al-Tabbakh and the residence of Muhammad al-Khaymi in front of the house of the qadi 'Abd al-Rahman al-Akhtabi, the supervisor (mubashir) of the waqf of al-Dashisha al-Kubra.⁹⁰ It is well known in its district. The rental of its land is for 90 consecutive hijri years from the first day of Dhu al-Hijja 1087 (4 February 1677). [54] The land belongs to the waqf of the deceased Muhammad Kasbey. Everything to be constructed within those boundaries will be part of this waqf.

(Also endowed) are all of 24 feddans of good soil (tin sawad) in the district of Shubramint in Ghiza Province. All this belongs to (Shahin Ahmad Agha) by its legal description. This land [55] is the private property of our master Shahin Ahmad Agha; it is his to dispose of up to this date. He purchased it from the amir Ahmad ibn Salim Çorbaji,⁹¹ a member of the ta'ifat Mustahfazan⁹² in the Cairo citadel, who is known as the katkhuda of the deceased Burhan al-Din Efendi,⁹³ the naqib al-sadah

85. Mir al-liwa' is a shortened form of amir al-liwa' al-sharif al-sultani (commander of the sultan's noble banner). It is the Arabic equivalent of the Ottoman sanjaq bey. See Encyclopaedia of Islam.

86. The qa'immaqam exercised all the authority of the governor in his absence, or upon his deposition. After 1604 this office was usually held by mamluk sanjaq bey. See "Kaim-makam" in Encyclopaedia of Islam, and Shaw, Organization, 53; 56-57; 135.

87. Because of the offensive odors they gave off and because of continuing population pressure on the area between Bab Zuwayla and the Ibn Tulun-Sultan Hasan district, the tanneries in the vicinity of the Birkat al-Fil (see fts 8, 57) were moved across the main canal to the area of Bab al-Luq. On the move of the old tanneries to Bab al-Luq, see Raymond, Artisans et Commerçants, Vol. I, 327-328.

88. The Khatt al-Madabigh al-Qadima is the first street on the right in Suq al-'Asir Street and connects to the Darb al-Nuqqaliyyin. 'Ali Mubarak, al-Khitat al-Tawfiqiyya al-Jadida, Vol. 3, 239-240, said that the tanneries were moved in 1865 to Old Cairo.

89. It is clear from this sentence that Shahin Ahmad Agha constructed a mausoleum for himself near his residence. He was actually buried in his mausoleum along with Yusuf Katkhuda 'Azaban, but the latter was later re-buried in his own mausoleum inside his mosque in the Mouski. See Ahmad Shalabi, Awdah al-Isharat, 626.

90. The Dashisha al-Kubra waqf united a large number of lucrative awqaf from the Mamluk and Ottoman periods. By the end of the eighteenth century it was sending 1,907,765 paras and 33,333 1/3 ardabbs of grain annually to the haramayn. See Shaw, French Revolution, 155-156. See also ft. 48.

91. This amir remains unidentified.

92. The Mustahfazan regiment, with its barracks in the upper citadel and its control of the most lucrative muqata'at, was the dominant corps in Egypt. See Shaw, French Revolution, 90-93.

93. This individual remains unknown, but from his title it is certain that he was a Turk.

*al-ashraf*⁹⁴ in Cairo, as it is certified in the document whose date is mentioned above.

[56] The land of the second makan is next to the sahrij known as the construction of our master Shahin Ahmad Agha and is part of the waqf of the deceased Muhammad Kasbey. The building on this land is the private property of our master Shahin Ahmad Agha. The rent of this land and the sale of the debris of this building is the responsibility of the supervisor (nazir) of the waqf (of Muhammad Kasbey). He is 'Ali Çelebi ibn Sha'ban Çorbaji of the ta'ifat Çerakise. (All this) is detailed and described in the rental agreement issued by the court [57] of Jami' al-Malik al-Salih in Cairo with the permission of the present *shaykh al-Islam*⁹⁵ in Cairo and dated 13 Dhu al-Qa'da (1087 A.H.). The above-mentioned land is his private property according to the *tazkira diwaniyya*⁹⁶ in Turkish, fully stamped and signed, and dated the 16th of the month mentioned below.

This is a true and legal waqf. [58] It may not be sold or given away, mortgaged or exchanged. According to its stipulations, it must be forever devoted to its purposes, which will be mentioned, or until Allah inherits the earth, for He is the best of inheritors.

The wakil mentioned above devoted the waqf of (Shahin Ahmad Agha) for the benefit of the sahrij constructed by our master Shahin Ahmad Agha located in Khatt al-Madabigh al-Qadima near the secondary [59] door of the Qusun mosque in front of the new mill in the open space in the street leading to the Da'udiyya mosque, and for the maktab above the sahrij as it is detailed in the waqf document of that maktab sahrij, etc., issued by this court on the 10th of Shawwal 1086. He added the income of the above-mentioned makan and land to the waqf of the above-mentioned sahrij and

94. Descendants of the Prophet through his daughter Fatima and her husband 'Ali were called ashraf (sing., sharif) or asadat (sing. sayyid) and enjoyed a special position in Muslim society. They were organized into large societies to advance their interests and to maintain their privileges. In the Ottoman Empire a naqib al-ashraf (supervisor of the descendants of the Prophet) appointed provincial naqibs to administer their affairs in that province. The Ottomans nominated a Turkish naqib al-ashraf until a representative of the powerful Egyptian Sadat family obtained the office about the middle of the eighteenth century. From 1762-1763 members of the rival al-Bakri family held this office, with only a few interruptions, until the early twentieth century. See Shaw, French Revolution, 103-104.

95. The chief Ottoman judge, who was the Hanafi chief qadi, was known as the qadi al-quda, the qadi 'askar (military judge), or the shaykh al-Islam. He presided over a judicial system divided into 36 judicial districts, each of which was supervised by an Ottoman appointed (Turkish) judge. These judges in turn appointed deputies (na'ibs), usually Arabic speaking, to act on their behalf or to subsidiary courts within their districts. On the judicial system in Ottoman Egypt, see Galal El-Nahal, The Judicial Administration of Ottoman Egypt in the Seventeenth Century.

96. The tazkira diwaniyya was the receipt from the governor's diwan which was given to any person having the right to claim an allowance from the treasury. The tazkirji was the official from the ruznama department who prepared these receipts. See Layla 'Abd al-Latif Ahmad, al-Idara, 312-313; 442, and by the same author, Ta'rikh wa Mu'arikhu Misr wa al-Sham Ibban al-'Asr al-'Uthmani (Cairo: al-Khanji, 1980), 46.

maktab to provide water, garments for the orphans, for their rations (jaraya) and other expenses, [60] as it is stated in the above-mentioned waqf document, without any modifications (from the previous waqf).

The wakil, acting as agent for our master Shahin Ahmad Agha, endowed the waqf, which includes all the building constructed on the hikr land located in Cairo in Khatt Qusun overlooking Birkat al-Fil⁹⁷ and known as the residence of our master Shahin [61] Ahmad Agha. It is on the main street. According to its waqf document, which is a rolled document, it was issued from al-Bab al-'Ali in Cairo and signed by the Shaykh al-Islam, our master Muhammad Efendi, the judge in Cairo at that time, on 11 Shawwal 1072 (30 May 1662).

It includes the southern facade of hewn stone. In it is an arched gateway closed by a single wooden door [62] of fine wood. It leads to an unroofed courtyard. Inside it, on the left, are four rooms and a kiosk (above), which overlooks the facade and the door. Facing the (person entering) the courtyard are two storerooms for the pantry and next to them is a kitchen and a staircase leading to two rooms above the already mentioned two storerooms. The rest of the staircase leads to four rooms.

In the courtyard, next to the staircase, is a stable [63] for 20 horses. Also in that courtyard is a storage room facing the interior. Above it is a reception room (maq'ad) having two columns and three arches. (That maq'ad) leads to two rooms, one of which overlooks the garden, the second of which overlooks the unroofed courtyard. Next to the door of the reception room are two storerooms.

Inside the courtyard are a basin, well, and a saqiyya.⁹⁸ Next to the reception hall, on the left, is an arched doorway closed by a single leaf of fine wood. It leads to a garden with grapevines, [64] bitter oranges, apples, and flowers. (The garden) has a well, a gazebo, and a closet (taz) with a wooden balustrade.

On the right side of the one entering the above-mentioned doorway is another door leading to a reception area paved in colored marble. It has two small *iwans*⁹⁹ and

97. The Birkat al-Fil, an area between Cairo and Fustat, had become the most aristocratic district of Cairo during the period when the grandees built their residences around the shore of its pond. For eight months of the year the Birkat al-Fil held water, then was turned into a garden for four months until the rising waters of the Nile could be diverted once again into its basin to transform it back into a pond. Raymond remarks that 40 % of the aristocrats lived around its shores in the 18th century. See al-Maqrizi, al-Khitat, Vol. II, 163-164; Ibn Zahira, al-Fada'il al-Bahira fi Mahasin Misr al-Qahira (Cairo: 1969), 209; Raymond, al-Ta'rikh al-Ijtima'i li al-Qahira al-'Uthmaniyya (Cairo: al-Madbuli, 1974), 179-181.

98. A saqiyya is a water wheel used to raise water, frequently from a well. Many Ottoman houses, especially those with gardens, had such wheels, turned by animals, in their grounds. The bir saqiyya is a well with a water wheel.

99. Iwan is a Persian word meaning upper hall, or summer chamber, with an open front. This description describes the iwans of either schools or residences. Documents call the small iwan, which is like a niche, a sidilla. See 'Abd al-Rahman Zaki, Mawsu'at Madinat al-Qahira, p. 18. See also Su'ad Maher, Masajid Misr (Cairo: 1980), Vol. IV, 19; Encyclopaedia of Islam.

three recessed windows overlooking the Birkat al-Fil. One of them leads to a *takhtabush*¹⁰⁰ on the northern side which overlooks the Birka.

The reception area has two marble columns and three arches, and a wooden balustrade. [65] It is paved with kiddan tiles. It leads on the right to a kiosk overlooking Birkat al-Fil. On the left is a door leading to a hall (qa'a) having two iwans and a *durr qa'a*¹⁰¹ paved in colored marble. Facing the main iwan is a windowsill overlooking the Birka and two sidillas,¹⁰² one on each side (of the window). One overlooks the Birka and leads to the takhtabush and the bedroom, which has another takhtabush. [66] The second sidalla has a window overlooking the reception area. In the durr qa'a is a door leading to a small hall known as a weapons storeroom.

In the courtyard is a door leading to an upper hall having two iwans, a durr qa'a, and two sidillas overlooking the Birka, and to four rooms, a kitchen and a niche for jars.

(The waqf includes) all the benefits, appurtenances, rights and dependencies delimited by four boundaries.

The southern boundary ends at the lane [67] overlooking Birkat al-Fil. That boundary has a facade and the (main) door. The northern boundary ends at the Birka. The eastern boundary ends at the house of the amir Hasan Jawish. Its correct description is that part of it ends at the sahrij known as the construction and waqf of the daughter of Sulayman Efendi;¹⁰³ the rest of that boundary ends at the makan (formerly) known as her residence, but known now as the residence of our master 'Abd al-Wahhab Efendi, the former qa'immaqam in Cairo. The western boundary ends at the makan of 'Abd al-Wahhab Efendi [68] but is better known as ending at (the makan of) the amir Hasan Jawish.

(The waqf includes) everything inside its boundaries, including its boundaries, rights, and everything relating to it.

Our master Shahin Ahmad Agha stipulated in the waqf (comprising) his residence whose boundaries have been described above that he has the right to add or subtract from it, to change it, exchange it, or sell it during his lifetime. After his death no one has the right to undertake any of these (transactions). [69] That has been communicated to our master the judge in a legal manner.

It occurred to the above-mentioned wakil, who represents our master Shahin Ahmad Agha, to join the income of the waqf of the large residence mentioned above to the

100. From the Persian word takhta, meaning an elevated platform surrounded by a parapet and provided with posts. The term was also used to describe an open hall. The takhtabush was open on opposite sides and generally used as a summer sitting area. See Tawfiq Ahmad 'Abd al-Jawwad, Ta'rikh al-'Imara wa al-Funun al-Islamiyya (Cairo: 1970), 199. See also Redhouse, Turkish-English Lexicon (Beirut: Librairie du Liban, 1987), 513.

101. The durr qa'a is that part of the floor between the doorway and the opposite wall. It is usually 4-5 inches lower than the rest of the room.

102. The sidallas are the raised areas found around the sides of a room divided by a durr qa'a. Sidallas are usually backed by a window. Larger sidallas are called iwans. See Edward Lane, The Manners and Customs of the Modern Egyptians (London: 1860), 11-13.

103. Their identities cannot be established without knowing more about their connections or positions held.

income of the other endowed buildings mentioned earlier after (paying) the expenses and the hikr rent for the large residence, which are explained in his waqf whose date is mentioned above, [70] for the support of the benefits of the sahrij and maktab mentioned above. This is added to his previous waqf (property) adjoining the above-mentioned sahrij, as are the utlaqs which have been endowed by the wakil on behalf of (Shahin Ahmad Agha) in the waqf issued from this court on the date mentioned above. [71] It is a legal addition (to the previous waqf).

There should be paid from the income of the endowed buildings mentioned above the rent towards the hikr of the newly built residence located in the Zuqaq Halab, whose land belongs to the waqf of the deceased Maghlabey al-Zardakash. It amounts to 10 new nisf copper (coins) monthly. The rent for the land [72] adjoining the sahrij belonging to the waqf of the deceased Muhammad Kasbey is 6 qurush ¹⁰⁴ annually, which means 1/2 qirsh monthly. The hikr rent for the large residence overlooking Birkat al-Fil which is the residence of our master the donor is paid to the following three awqaf and amounts annually [73] to 47 silver qurush; for the waqf of the deceased Anis Bey, 14 qurush annually; for the waqf of the deceased Janim al-Zardakash, 7 qurush annually, as it is stipulated relating to the above-mentioned large residence; and 25 qurush annually for the waqf of the deceased 'Abd al-Rahman Efendi, [74] as is customary. These are the hikr rents of the three awqaf whose mention was promised above.

There shall be paid a salary to four Qur'an reciters in the large residence overlooking Birkat al-Fil, which is the residence of our master the donor. As compensation for their recitation every day beginning at sunrise of as much as they can recite from the blessed Qur'an (they shall be paid) 60 nisf fidda-s, or their equivalent at the time of payment. They shall conclude their recitation with the Surat al-Ikhlās and al-Mi'wathitayn and [75] the Fatiha. ¹⁰⁵ They will dedicate the reward of that to the Prophet (Allah bless him), to all previous prophets, and to our master the donor during his lifetime and to his soul after his death, then to his freed slaves and all deceased Muslims. All this is stated in the waqf document of the above-mentioned large residence.

All the unspent [76] income from the combined waqf, both this one and the previous one, after the expenses for the sahrij, its filling with water, the expenses for the maktab, the clothes for the orphans, for their rations and stipends, for the children's teacher, his assistant, for the muzammalat, for the salaries of the supervisor, the mubashir, and the shadd, for the rent collector and other expenses, as they are stipulated in detail in the waqf document issued from this court whose date is mentioned above have all been paid, as well as the expenses for the maintenance of the waqf, our master Shahin Ahmad Agha the donor [77] has the right to dispose of himself during his lifetime (may Allah grant him a long and successful life), then after his death (the unspent remainder) will be distributed to his freed slaves, male and female, equally, and after them to their children and grandchildren, and to their descendants, rank after rank, generation after generation. If one of them dies having left a child or grandchild, [78] his portion shall go to his child or grandchild, even his if it is the child of his daughter. If he has left no child or grandchild, his portion will be distributed among those equal in rank. If they all perish and death overcomes them all and the earth is free of them entirely, the remaining unspent income of the waqf, after all expenses of the waqf have been paid, including its maintenance and repair, shall be spent on the welfare of the haramayn al-sharifayn, that is, the haram at Mecca and the haram [79] at Medina. ... If it is impossible to spend for one, (the surplus) shall be spent for the other. If it is impossible to spend for either of them (may Allah not allow that), it shall be distributed to the poor and unfortunate wherever they are as the supervisor sees fit and as best he can.

104. The silver qirsh (pl., qurush) was equivalent to 40 nisf fiddas/paras in Egypt.

105. The Surat al-Ikhlās, verse 92, is one of the shortest and oft-quoted verses of the Qur'an.

The Fatiha, or opening verse, is perhaps the most oft-repeated verse of the Qur'an. The Mi'wathitayn are the last two verses of the Qur'an, verses 113-114.

The wakil stipulated on behalf of the donor the stipulations recorded here, [80] and affirmed that they must be obeyed. Among them (the donor) stipulated that the supervision of his waqf and the responsibility for it shall be his during his lifetime (may Allah grant him a long life). The donor has the right to change agents, or executors, and to assign these to whomever, or whenever he chooses. He also stipulated the right to add or deduct (from the waqf), to change or exchange it, to grant or to withhold, during his lifetime. After his death no one has the right to make changes in it. After him, the supervision of the large residence overlooking Birkat al-Fil, which is the residence of our master the donor, shall go alone to his kathhuda, the amir 'Ali Agha ibn 'Umar, the above-mentioned wakil, during his lifetime, then after his death it will be assumed by the eldest, then the next eldest, of the freed slaves of the donor, as is stipulated in the waqf for that house issued by al-Bab al-'Ali court on the date mentioned above along with the other endowed buildings, [82] then to their sons or grandsons or descendants, as explained before. When they all perish, the supervision of the waqf and its executorship will go to the current *nazir al-haramayn*¹⁰⁶ in Cairo.

He stipulated that the appointment to the aforementioned positions shall be the right of the supervisor of the waqf, now and forever. The first responsibility of the supervisor is to preserve the waqf, to maintain and [83] prolong it, and to increase its income, even if he has to spend all the waqf's income. [The rest of the document follows the wording of the original waqf precisely for the next seven pages].

[89] This was issued in the presence of al-Amir Musa, kathhuda of the deceased Ali Agha Dar al-Sa'ada and the former shaykh al-haram al-sharif al-nabawi; ... al-Amir Hasan, one of the a'yan of the Mutafarriqa, the retainer of the deceased 'Ali Agha; ... al-Amir Mustafa Agha, the khazindar of the deceased 'Ali Agha; ... [90] al-Amir

106. Once again, Shahin Ahmad Agha is trying to guarantee that when the families of all his slaves die out, his waqf shall be supervised by another agha of the dar al-sa'ada in Istanbul, not by one of the local Mamluk amirs.

Ishaq ibn 'Abdallah, one of the Mutaḥḥarriqa amirs and retainer of the deceased 'Alī Agha, shaykh of the already mentioned haram; ... al-Amir Hasan ibn 'Abdallah from the ta'ifat Tefenkjiyan in Cairo, who is the retainer of our master Sulaymān Efendi, the present muhāsibji in the diwan al-'alī in Cairo; ... al-Amir Muḥammad ibn 'Abdallah of the Mutaḥḥarriqa (corps), the retainer of our master Shāhin Ahmad Agha; [91] ... al-Amir 'Umar ibn 'Abdallah, the present khazindar of our master Shāhin Ahmad Agha. They acknowledge all this legally. (The wakil) testifies to that himself and all that has been (legally) witnessed on the first day of Dhu al-Hijja, the last month of the year 1087.

Allah is the sufficient and best agent (wakil).
