Pahlavi Documents on Arabs and Christians in Early Islamic Times**

♦ ABSTRACT

In this contribution original Pahlavi documents of clearly Zoroastrian provenance from the 7th and early 8th centuries are presented showing direct or indirect connections with increasing Arabic dominance in Iran. There are two groups of documents: 1. documents of the so-called “Pahlavi Archive”, coming from the region west and south of Qom; 2. the documents from Tabarestān in Northern Iran, i.e. the region of modern Rūdbār on the river Sefid, dealing mostly with juridical matters.

The so-called “Pahlavi Archive” comprises economic documents as well as letters mostly from the second half of the 7th century and are housed in Berlin and Berkeley (about 300 items); there are also some scattered documents in Los Angeles and in private hands, probably in Iran. Though most of the documents in question are of economic content (they refer to daily life) they sometimes give hints at religious facts, taxes and measurements (Iranian and Arabic). Religion is explicitly referred to in a letter on wine growing where we learn of a regular payment for “prosperity” ~ “protection” of the religion (i.e. the Zoroastrian religion).

The documents from Tabarestān, again clearly Zoroastrian, show no connections to Arabic matters but mention a Nestorian community.

♦ RÉSUMÉ

Vivre ensemble dans un Iran en mutation.

Documents en pahlavi sur les Arabes et les chrétiens dans les débuts de l’Islam

Dans cette contribution, des documents originaux en Pahlavi d’origine clairement zoroastrienne du VII<sup>e</sup> et du début du VIII<sup>e</sup> siècle sont présentés, montrant des liens directs ou indirects avec l’affirmation de la domination arabe en Iran. Il existe deux groupes de documents : 1. les documents de l’« Archive Pahlavi », provenant de la région à l’ouest et au sud de Qom, et 2. les documents de Tabarestān dans le nord de l’Iran, c’est-à-dire la région de l’actuelle Rūdbār sur le fleuve Sefīd, traitant principalement de questions juridiques. L’« archive Pahlavi » comprend des documents économiques ainsi que des lettres datant pour la plupart de la seconde moitié du VII<sup>e</sup> siècle qui sont conservées à Berlin et Berkeley (environ 300 pièces) ; il existe également quelques documents épars à Los Angeles et chez des collectionneurs privés, probablement en Iran. Bien que la plupart des documents en question aient un contenu économique (ils se réfèrent à la vie quotidienne), ils donnent parfois des indications sur des faits religieux, des impôts et des mesures (iraniens et arabes). La religion est explicitement mentionnée dans une lettre sur la viticulture où l’on apprend l’existence d’un paiement régulier pour la « prospérité » ~ la « protection » de la religion (c’est-à-dire la religion zoroastrienne). Les documents de Tabarestān, là encore clairement zoroastriens, ne montrent aucun lien avec les questions arabes mais mentionnent une communauté nestorienne.

العيش معاً في إيران متغيرة، وثائق بهلوية حول العرب والمسيحيين في العصر الإسلامي المبكر في هذا الإسهام تُقدم مجموعة من الوثائق البهلوية الأصلية ذات المنشأ الزرادشتي الواضح التي تعود إلى القرن السابع وبدايات القرن الثامن الميلاديين والتي تُظهر علاقات مباشرة أو غير مباشرة مع تنامي السيطرة العربية على إيران. وتوجد مجموعتان من الوثائق: ١. وثائق ما يعرف بـ «المحفوظات البهلوية»، القادمة من المنطقة الواقعة غربي قم وجنوبها، و٢. الوثائق القادمة من طبرستان شمالي إيران، أي منطقة رودبار الحديثة الواقعة على نهر سفيد، وتتعلق في معظمها بمسائل قانونية. ويحتوي ما يعرف بـ «الأرشيف البهلوي» على وثائق اقتصادية فضلاً عن رسائل

يعود أغلبها إلى النصف الثاني من القرن السابع الميلادي، وهي محفوظة في برلين وبركلي (نحو ٣٠٠ وثيقة)؛ كذلك ثمة مجموعة من الوثائق المتفرقة في لوس أنجلوس وفي مقتنيات خاصة، من المحتمل أن تكون في إيران. ورغم أن معظم الوثائق المعنية ذات مضمون اقتصادي (يتعلق بالحياة اليومية) إلا أنها تتضمن أحياناً تلميحات إلى مسائل دينية وأخرى متعلقة بالضرائب والمقاييس (الإيرانية والعربية). وهناك إشارة جلية إلى الدين في رسالة متعلقة بمسألة زراعة الكروم، نعلم منها عن وجود دفع منتظم مقابل «الازدهار» ~ «الحماية» للدين (أي الدين الزرادشتي). أما الوثائق القادمة من طبرستان، وهي بدورها زرادشتية المنشأ بشكل جلي، فلا تتضمن أي روابط بالمسائل العربية وإنما تذكر طائفة نسطورية.

IN THE FOLLOWING relevant original Pahlavi texts referring to relations between Zoroastrians, Christians and Arabs in early Islamic times are presented and discussed; all except the first one are from the so-called “Pahlavi Archive”.<sup>1</sup>

First published on Weber, 2005, pp. 225–231. There (p. 225) it was surmised that “it seems likely that the letter was written in Egypt in early Islamic times by a Persian merchant who was Zoroastrian but who disguised his religious affiliation by using the specific formula of the first line and by not mentioning any personal name”. This assumption must be corrected in two essential points: 1. the major point is that the Persian merchant was not a Zoroastrian but a Muslim which is clearly underlined by the use of yazd (not yazdān) for ‘God’ in lines 1, 7 and 13; and particularly 2. by the term ahlaw “righteous” in line 19 which is to be understood as a confession of the sender (or writer) to belong to the new religion of Islam. As a matter of fact the sender still does not mention his name. The letter is addressed to the brother of the sender who tries to persuade him to enter in business with his help and who presents the prospect of making his fortune and, by this event, finally would enter in marriage. By improving the translation in many points the letter is fully understandable now.

1. On the “Pahlavi Archive” generally see Weber, 2008a; for its dating Weber, 2008b.

[1] In the name of God! [2] Dearest brother! To be received [3] health and greetings and blessing and every fortune (and) [4] peace for the body of you, Sir, increasingly [5] should be! For Your information [6] I am writing (that): with the help [7] of God (Allah's help) I continuously am in health. [8] I know: Observe everything what's going on. [9] Oh, you *sorrowful one! Come on! [10] Because here I have the whole profit for you [11] so that I, from that fairness there, (carried out everything) [12] which you told me (and I) kept (it) safe. [13] Proceed with someone whilst God will be the [14] guide, (and) everything you want [15–16] (together) with you I will undertake. You should be kind to people so that someone will provide camels for hire. [17] For you greetings should be (and as soon as) you will have made a fortune [18–20] someone will enter into marriage with you. A righteous one. Many, many greetings should come to you.

Commentary

First published Weber, 2005, pp. 225–231. To be re-published in Weber, forthcoming b.

Line 17: <ʿṭ'n> = ādān 'wealthy, solvent; wealth' (CPD); cf. the idiomatic phrase ādān ud anādān 'wealthiness and poverty' in Berk. 129, 6, and 14.

Line 18–19: kas abāg tō (zan)ih nišānēd, cf. Man. MP pd znny nš'stn 'zum Weibe nehmen' Sund., KPT.

Line 19: The reading <šhlyk> in the original publication is obsolete now; the word is rather to be read <'hlwb> = ahlaw 'the righteous one', here underlining that the sender (or even writer) of the letter is a Muslim.

As for the writing two things are remarkable: 1. the vertical stroke following the <-l-> has a bend at the bottom like the <-R-> in the following word <ŠRM>; and 2. the final  has only a relatively short stroke at the bottom. Nevertheless the reading is certain.

2. Lit. "full of action"; after the full phrase b-ismi-llāhi r-raḥmāni r-raḥīmi. This is often translated as "In the name of God, the Most Gracious, the Most Merciful". Still incorrectly interpreted as 'who made me' in Weber, 2008b, p. 219.

Commentary

The word pēšānīg means lit. ‘forehead’, for the heterogram, cf. Junker, 1912, p. 82; Nyberg, 1988, p. 45 (X, 12 text), 75 (comm.). – The plural mazgītān is the second occurrence of this word in the documents and can be used as an argument for their dating because the first mosque Masğid-i ‘atīq in Mamağgān (near of Qom) was built in 715–718 AD.<sup>3</sup> Therefore this strip of a letter must have been written after that date. But see Berk. 66 year 48 (PYE = 699/700 CE)!

Commentary

Ed. Gignoux, 2009, p. 90f.

Line 3: The name is clearly to be read Rašnīg where Gignoux prefers a derivation from rām “heureux, paisible”, which is not possible since the <-m> in <l'm> should have been connected with the following <-yk>. The basis will be Rašn, name of the 18th day, cf. other “calendar names” like Xvarīg (Gignoux, 1986, no. 1033) belonging to X<sup>w</sup>ar, name of the 11th day, Tīrīg (Gignoux, 1986, no. 902), belonging to Tīr, name of the 4th month and of the 13th day, or Mihriḡ LA 1, 1, belonging to Mihr, name of the 7th month and of the 16th day.

Berk. 66, 3

In 2012, it was argued that “The decisive step for the later urban development of Qom occurred when a group of Aš‘ari Arabs from Yemen came to the area; a central element was the early contact with the leading local Zoroastrian Persian noble Yazdānfādār.”

It seems reasonable that the coming of these groups put an end to the Zoroastrian life as it is documented in the texts; testimony of this kind obviously ceased with the year 702 CE. Later documents do not belong to this group of the ‘Pahlavi Archive’.

But from this document it is clear that an earlier date of the first mosques must be thought of, at least by 699–700 CE.

Commentary

First published in Weber, 2014a, pp. 185–187. No year preserved, but the document must have been written presumably between the years 46 and 49 (697–698 and 700–701 AD) since the following names are well attested in that span of time:

Māhpērōz Berlin 2 (year 30 = 681–682 AD), Berk. 75 (year 45 = 696–697 AD), Berlin 23 (year 46 = 697–698 AD), Berk. 15, Berk. 84, Berk. 87, Berk. 91, (year 47 = 698–699 AD), Berk. 26 (year 48 = 699–700 AD);
Mardōy Berk. 6 (year 46 = 697–698 AD), Berk. 88 (year 49 = 700–701 AD), Berk. 36 (no year), also Berlin 31, 7 (no year);

4. This means that 1 grīw (current) is to be equated to ca. 0,543 grīw (former); cf. also Hinz, 1955, p. 38.

Māhpērōz and Mardōy together in Berk. 226 (no year given), and also Frāy (as the person who seals the document) especially for the years 46–49.
 Lines 3 and 14: The name Mardōy is well documented, see above.
 Lines 4 and 14: The attributive to Mardōy seems to be <mdyd'lyk> which, following the interpretation in Berk. 34, 2, is tentatively interpreted as maydārīg 'wine-grower, vintner':

Berk. 93, 4: &lt;mdyd'lyk&gt;

Berk. 34, 2: &lt;mdyd'l&gt;

Line 8: In the middle of this line there is a character between pad and padīrāy, the only possible reading is <'n> which fits the place and the meaning.
 Line 9: The name Māhpērōz (well attested, see above) is written between the lines 8 and 9 but governed by rāy in line 9. – Another interlinear group of characters left of Māhpērōz must be read <sṣn'k> = spenāg 'holy', written over kabīz and therefore explicitly referring to it, here in the sense of 'good, sanctified' as a hint at its traditional value.
 Line 10: <mhy> for meh 'old' is the most probable reading though the writing is somewhat unusual.
 Line 12: The phrase pad kabīz ī dūdag attested again in Berk. 91, 6, is in contrast to pad kabīz [spenāg] | ī meh 'according to the [sanctified] measure | of old' (lines 9–10) and Berk. 108, 2–3 pad kabīz ud dōlag ud paymān ī | šahr 'according to the measurements of the town' and is therefore understood as 'the local measurement' that was now in use under the Zoroastrian Persians (perhaps an adaptation of Arabic measurement?).
 Line 15: The name of the person who sealed the document is illegible but may be restored after Berk. 6, 9.

Commentary

Ed. Gignoux, 2010a, p. 68; Weber, 2014a, p. 181. The new readings now replace all previous ones and provide us with a more coherent translation.

Line 3: The reading ⟨'m'l⟩ āmār (Gignoux) must be ruled out; in fact it is the spelling for ⟨'myl⟩ Amīr, Arab. أمير.

Line 4: By “Father” very probably Yazdānpādār is meant who lived in Yazdānābestān (west of Qom). – The verbal heterogram is not to be read ⟨ŠDRWNym⟩ but rather ⟨Y'TWNt'⟩. – The last word in the line is to be emended to ⟨yzd'np[ 'nk⟩; on yazdānbānag ōstāndār see Weber, 2008a, p. 36 where the reading †yasn-pānag was still favoured.

Line 5: 'sūr [swl | M swr, N ~] ‘meal, feast, banquet’ (CPD). – The earlier favoured reading ⟨kt' n⟩ must be changed to ⟨ks-c⟩ = kas-iz ‘anybody’ not ⟨ks-' n⟩ because in this case the ⟨s⟩ and ⟨'⟩ would have been written together, i.e. in a ligature. With this interpretation we meet Gignoux, ‘villageois’ (letter of 17-5-2011).

Line 6: The sequence būd x<sup>w</sup>adāy (according to Gignoux) is paleographically correct but syntactically difficult; it becomes clearer if we read lines 5–7 sūr ī kas-iz ud abārīg | tāzīgān kas

abāg būdan x<sup>w</sup>adāy | rāy framūd yaštan ‘he ordered to celebrate a banquet for anyone and the other Arabs on behalf of You, Sir, to be together with them’.

Lines 10–11: ⟨l<sup>s</sup>yk’n⟩ (Gignoux) is not possible; before the ⟨l⟩ there is a ligature of two characters which is disregarded. A reading ⟨hwlšyṭ’n⟩ = X<sup>w</sup>aršēdān would make sense representing a name which is also attested in Berk. 106, 7, Berk. 141, 6 and Berk. 237, 3. Since X<sup>w</sup>aršēdān is mentioned, in Berk. 106, 7, with the additional information ī pad garmīh the question arises whether or not the banquet mentioned here could have taken place exactly there.<sup>5</sup>

[1] As document of the goods: the mediators of month Ho[rdād] (3rd month) [2] of the year 38 (689–690 CE): on behalf of the expenses of the family of [3] the ōstāndār, born with inherited knowledge, to the bun of Čahārbōxt of [4] Nēwbēhagān from Friyağ who is manager in Namēwar, wheat [5] grīw 190, grīw 50, grīw 50, grīw 50. From another purpose of Zādānfarrox, the overseer, piglets of Rēgān(?) [11] 2. 1 Biryānī. 3 curd (soups?). 6 birds, small birds (?) [12] 27. From Maškān 1 ox was brought out of 151[ ]. [13] And wheat flour from the bun of Naxčīragān... [ ] [14]... [15] – Verso: Gone out from the *bath-house, month Hordād of the year 38.

Commentary

First published Weber, 2010, pp. 52–55. In this article the relevant phrase referring to the Amīr was completely misunderstood.

[8] pad Namēwar dārīg gōspand 11 ○ dāšn ī pad bay [9] ī Mihr rāy gōspand 2 ○ ayārīd ī kār Amīr rāy [10] 1 [7] (To the bun of Pērōz) in Anārgarān from Farrox, [8] the manager in Namēwar, 11 sheep. On behalf of the gift for God [9] Mihr 2 sheep. On behalf of the Amīr, who evaluated the action [10] 1 (sheep).

Line 9: It is noteworthy that there are circles written over the three words ⟨`y`lyṭ'⟩, ⟨k`l⟩ and ⟨`myl⟩; their meaning remains unknown. It is now clear—after the interpretation of ⟨`y`lyṭ'⟩ ayārd Tab. 13, 3. 13. Tab. 23, 3. 4—that the word in question must be read ⟨`y`lyṭ'⟩ = ayārīd sec. prt. of ayār- prs. ‘register, evaluate’. Thus, in this phrase there is no hint at “the unwelcome character of Arab taxation” as I put it earlier. The same phrase seems to be repeated in line 14.

Commentary

Unpublished letter from Argawān to Windād-Burzmīhr, the well-known entrepreneur. Letter of Type ib<sup>6</sup>. To be published also in Weber, forthcoming b.

Line 1: The reading of sālār is by no means problematic<sup>7</sup>. Earlier attempts to read this word as **jād-dār* ‘*share-holder’ are obsolete now. – Windād-Burzmīhr is a Zoroastrian entrepreneur whose financial activities are known from various documents, e.g. Berk. 101, Berk. 227<sup>8</sup>; Berk. 81 and Berk. 231 are documents that reveal intense financial activities of

6. The letter types will be described in Weber, forthcoming b.

7. For this word the reading sālār is given in Gignoux, 2004, p. 46, “mais le contexte ne nous aide aucunement à préciser ce que recouvre ce terme”. Cf. again Gignoux, 2010b, p. 146, “Ce commandant pouvait être un ancien officier de l’armée impériale d’un haut rang”—an assumption which is by no means justified, it must not necessarily be a commandant but simply the “first man” in an undertaking, cf. ‘leader, master’ (CPD).

8. Now published in Weber, 2019, pp. 380–382.

Windād-Burzmīhr. The first one, Berk. 81, sealed by Windād-Burzmīhr, contains a list of the dividends (in cash and by trade (?) with Turkish silver and morocco leather) gained in the year 12,<sup>9</sup> and the large document Berk. 231<sup>10</sup> is an accountancy for the year 11 and investments for the year 12 of Zādōy ī durgar ‘Zādōy the carpenter’ where Windād-Burzmīhr functions as an employer.

Line 2: Argawān ‘the purple one’ (CPD), or “Scarlett”, is the most probable reading of the name of the sender which is to be expected in this place of the letter. The name, though today a woman’s name, originally an professional name refers to a person trading with purple or scarlet textiles.

Line 5: For a discussion of the term Amīr in the documents see Weber, 2014a, pp. 179–189. Abdīn is the common Arabic name.

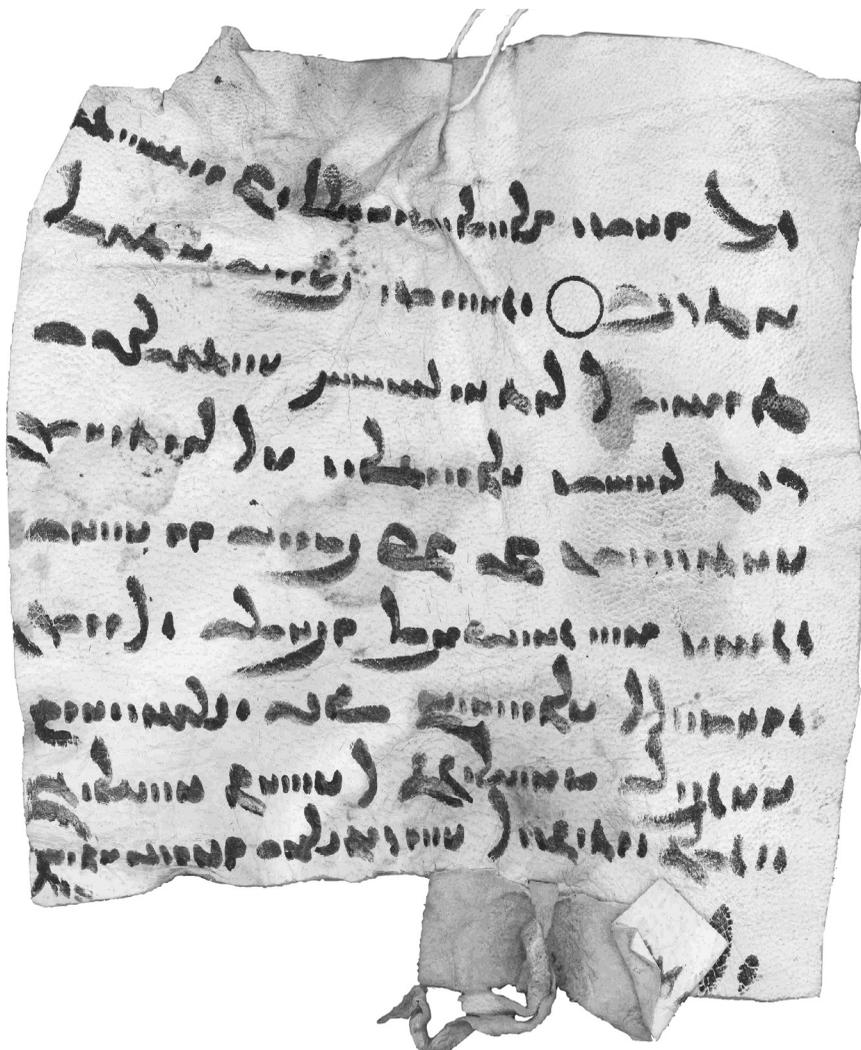

Fig. 9. Letter (Berk. 34). Parchment, vertical rectangle, 15 × 13.5 cm, bulla absent, bands remain at bottom center, 10 lines, verso blank.

9. Published in Weber, 2012, pp. 64–65.

Commentary

Gignoux, 2008, p. 836, discusses lines 1 and 3–4; ed. Weber, 2013b, pp. 178–179. The letter may be classed with Type 1b. The letter will be re-published in Weber, forthcoming b.

Line 1: ⟨'wsṭ'nd'l⟩ as usual after the honorific zād xrad-windād; Gignoux, (2008, p. 836) ī dilēr is a misreading due to the fact that, in the place where ⟨'wsṭ'nd'l⟩ is written, possibly two characters were written earlier but had been insufficiently erased so that a second ⟨l⟩ is to be seen which actually has no function. – The name of the sender, tentatively read as Öhrmazd-pad-moγ, is unique and will denote something like '(having) Öhrmazd as magus', cf. e.g. pad-pānag [PWNp'nk'] 'guarded, protected' (CPD).

Lines 2 and 3: With regard to wine-growing in the region of Qom cf. Drechsler, 1999, p. 253. Mentioning relatively huge quantities of wine in the documents (cf. e.g. Berk. 48) means that there must have been big areas for vineyards.

Lines 2 and 5: <B-ḡp'ṭ'nyh> ba-ābādānīh here in its etymological sense 'protection'. For <B-> cf. Weber, 2012, p. 63. With regard to wine-growing in the region of Qom cf. Drechsler 1999, p. 253.

Line 3: Instead of <hw'dšn'Y>, Gignoux, 2008, p. 836, has <gwsṡnd>. End of line <mdyd'lyh> cf. <-d'lyh> in Mazda 2, 5.

Lines 3–4: <Y kwm lwṡṡ'k> = ī kom rōstāg, "or kom pourrait être la forme ancienne de Qom" (Gignoux, letter 3-2-2006).

Line 6: <wcyhšnyk> adj. 'of separation, segregation'; cf. <wchṡṡ> = wizīhist 'separated, scattered' Berlin 30a R 18. - The spelling <gwbṡ'lyh> is the scribe's error who should have written <gwṡṡ'lyh> but erroneously chose the prs. stem <gwb-> instead. - The term dād-ayār (not in CPD) is best interpreted as 'legal advisor' attested again in P.Pehl. 564, 4.

Line 7: The reading of *pattān seems quite certain; but it is obvious that the meaning 'noise, resonance' given in the CPD does not suit the context. If we start from the verb pattūdan, prs. stem pattāy-, 'stay, remain, last, endure' (CPD) a verbal noun in *-ana- could indeed result in pattān having the meaning 'endurance' or the like; for the formation of this word cf. āsān 'at rest, easy, peaceful' belonging to the verb āsūdan, prs. stem āsāy- 'rest, repose'.

Line 9: <wc'lm> 1st sg. prs. of wizārdan, wizār- [wc'l-tn' | M wyc'rd, wyc'r-, J bz'rd-, N guzārdan] 'separate; explain, interpret; perform, fulfil, redeem' (CPD), in this context 'pay'.

Line 10 repeats the addressee and the sender mentioned in line 1.

Translation

Dādēnwindād provided 20 mounts for the crops on which this receipt has been written for the sake of the above (mentioned) Sir (= Dādēnwindād) to meet the trouble of the bun centre (depository of the bun) of the Nestorians (lit. Syrian religion). He sealed the tie of this reminder with the seal of the Ōstāndār.

Commentary

Dādēnwindād is attested from year 36 (PYE = 687–688 CE) through year 41 (PYE = 692–693 CE) either as ī pad Yazdānābestān dārīg or even as ī pad Yazdānābestān bunbān. Yazdānābestān itself was situated some 10 km West of Qom (Weber, 2010, p. 42); this scenario makes it certain that the **bunābād* of the Nestorians must be looked for in the same region, i.e. Qom; cf. B. Spuler, 2014, p. 202.

Line 5: The word sēj ‘danger, trouble’ is attested in the following places: Doc. I, 5 (this document); Berk. 231, 11, 13, 17; Berlin 22, 7.

Line 5: **bunābād* is a hapax in the texts of the “Pahlavi Archive”; there is a strong dash covering the lower parts of the first three characters coming from the lower stroke of the ⟨b⟩ of **bunābād*. Cf. ⟨ms'p'ṭ'⟩ meh-ābād ‘retirement camp’, or ‘home of the veterans’ P.Pehl. 572 R 2; ⟨wlg'p't'⟩ warg-ābād ‘repository of papyri, archive’ P.Pehl. 572 V 5; see now Weber, 2018, pp. 143–144. Therefore it seems reasonable to interpret **bunābād* as ‘depository of the bun’: the term bun seems to denote “a form of inventory holding of the community which contained corn, oil and other things of daily maintenance; from that an individual was allowed to receive certain amounts for his living” (according to Weber, 2010, p. 51).

Line 6: The reading of ⟨dyn ṣwlyk⟩ = dēn asūrīg is the most probable one though still tentative; it testifies to the existence of Nestorian communities in early Islamic times in the region of Qom. For asūrīg (lit. ‘Syrian’) see also ⟨swlyk’n⟩ **Sūrīgān* ‘Assyrian (Nestorian) quarter’
Tab. 24, 2. 31.

Line 7: On the type of document called āyādgār see Weber, 2018, p. 130.
