TWO NEW MONUMENTS
INSCRIBED IN HIEROGLYPHICS
FROM PTOLEMAIC EGYPT

BY

DIA' ABOU GHAZI

*For Dr. Abd el-Mohsen el-Khashab
Sixtieth birthday.*

A. — A FOUNDATION STELA FROM SAKHA.

In his excavations at Sakha<sup>(1)</sup>, Dr. el-Khashab has discovered a limestone stela inscribed in Hieroglyphic. The inscriptions are incised nearly in the middle of the stela in two rectangles. The small one is severely mutilated, while the other, although somewhat damaged, could be deciphered. Within the latter, the Hieroglyph runs in four vertical columns topped by the sign of the sky, spangled with stars, supported by two lines which framed its rectangular shape. Such decoration is a brief representation of the Universe<sup>(2)</sup>. The first left column turns right<sup>(3)</sup> and is dedicated chiefly to Amūn, God of Gw<sup>(4)</sup>, represented on his throne, wearing the <sup>(1)</sup> Discovered in the season 1963 — Before transferring it to the museum, the inscriptions were lost, so it was left in place. For this, I am unable to give the dimensions. But the main inscription is about 12 × 36 cm.

<sup>(4)</sup> Gw was decisively considered as H<sub>3</sub>sw by DARESSY, ASAE, XVII, p. 48. Also GARDINER in his Onomastica II, pp. 183*. On the contrary MONTET, Geographie I, p. 91 considers Gw and H<sub>3</sub>sw as two different places. For the reading H<sub>3</sub>sw, see GARDINER, ibid., pp. 181*. H<sub>3</sub>sw, the Xoïs of the Greeks, known now as Sakha, is situated nearly in the middle of the Delta (cf. GARDINER, ibid., p. 182*). A detailed study of the site is in preparation by Dr. el-Khashab. It seems that this city two feathers holding on his extended left hand the w's sceptre and the sign nh to the Horus name of the dedicator, while the right hand is raised to his left shoulder. The three other columns turn left and carries the titulary of Ptolemy VIII<sup>(1)</sup> (Euergetes II) and Cleopatra II (Pl. I).

The decipherment runs as follows (fig. 1) :

Horus the younger over whose life one pleases on the throne of his father-with pleasant being, splendour in his glittering together with the living Apis, the one of both mistresses, the one who rejoices the heart of both lands, the Golden Horus, mighty in power, master of feasts as his father Ptah-Tatennen, the father of the Gods, sovereign as Re', king of Upper and Lower Egypt heir of the manifested Gods (Epiphanus), chosen of Ptah, stablishing (lit. doing) the justice of Re', the living image of Amūn son of Re' Ptolemy living eternally beloved was of high importance as it was designated «the mansion of kingship» (DÜMICHEN, Geog. Inschriften, III, 45 and IV, 112 or «the mansion of kingship of Re'», RT, XXVII, p. 190, 1.52 and note 3 and the great gods such as Re' and Amun were considered as its deities (cf. BRUGSCH, Recueil de Monuments III, pl. LXXXVII/6, GUILLMANT, Tombeau de Rameses IX, pl. 48, Cairo stela No. 45702 published by DARESSY, op. cit., p. 45-48, GARDINER, op. cit., p. 183*).

(1) After the classification of Otto and Bengtson, Euergetes II was definitely considered as Ptolemy VIII and not Ptolemy IX as mentioned in most old book. e.g. BUDGE (E.A. W.), The Book of the kings of Egypt II, London, 1908, pp. 130, LEPSIUS (C.R.), Königsbuch der alten Ägypter, Berlin 1858, Taf. LV-LVI. Cf. also PAULY-WISSOWA,

Real-Encyclopaedia, XXIII/2, col. 1600. We can notice here the mention of the five Pharaonic names and the extolling of the main deities of Egypt Re', Ptah and Amūn in the royal names. These features became a necessity from the time of Ptolemy V, see BOUCHÉ-LECLERCQ (A), Histoire des Lagides, t. III/1, Paris, 1906, p. 75, note 2, DRIOTON, ASAE, XLIV, p. 156-157, HOLMBERG, The God Ptah, p. 80 and cf. also, GAUTHIER, Livre des rois, t. IV, pp. 214.

(2) This sign sometimes replaced  from the New Kingdom, see BUDGE, Kings I, p. xxvi and 130, DRIOTON, op. cit., p. 124 f, LD, III, 65-e.

(3) Here ends the deceased Ptolemies (συμβατοι Σεοι) to whom the monument is dedicated. See BOUCHÉ-LECLERCQ, op. cit., p. 74 and 75, note 3.

of Ptah with his sister <sup>(1)</sup>, his wife, the sovereign, the ruler of both lands Cleopatra (II) the two beneficent Gods beloved of : Amun-Re<sup>c</sup>, lord of Gw <sup>(2)</sup>, he who created himself <sup>(3)</sup> the brother Gods (Philadelphos), the Beneficent Gods (Euergetes), the Father — loving Gods (Philopatores) the Gods who appear (Epiphanes), the God who honours his father (Eupator), the Mother — loving God (Philometor) and the Beneficent Gods (Euergetes II and Cleopatra II).

Amūn here is the major God to whom the building is dedicated in his qualities as the god of the locality <sup>(4)</sup> and the god who fashioned himself i.e. as a primordial god. It is also dedicated to the Ptolemaic ancestors in their cult names and to the ruling King and Queen <sup>(5)</sup>.

Thus we can state that Ptolemy VIII has erected in the 6th nome of Lower Egypt a building consecrated for the worshipping of Amūn, his ancestors and himself with his sisterwife. This adds a new site to his activities shown in temples all over Egypt and Nubia <sup>(6)</sup>.

Precisely, we cannot date this monument, as the reign of Ptolemy VIII was somewhat complicated <sup>(7)</sup> by reigning solely occasionally, sometimes with his sister Cleopatra II,

<sup>(3)</sup> The same epithet as on the Louvre stela. See GOLENISCHEFF (W.), ZÄS, 41, p. 92-93, cf. also DRIOTON, op. cit., p. 132-133.

<sup>(4)</sup> It is known that Amūn is an Upper Egyptian God. Introducing him in Lower Egypt, naturally goes back to the high supremacy he acquired after the Middle Kingdom. He was mentioned as God of Sakha on several monuments from latest times. Even on coins, this nome was represented by the ram of Amūn. Cf. ASAE, XII, p. 194; DÜMICHEN, Geog. Inschriften III, 45; BRUGSCH, Thes. 644, 620/6 and 624/6; CHASSINAT, Mammisi, p. 169, Edfou III, 246; COUYAT and others with his second wife Cleopatra III or with both wives. He reigned with Cleopatra II in the years 145-141 B.C., 140-139, 136-133, 123-121 to any of which we can assign our monument.

B. — A FINE LAPIS LAZULI TABLET.

This undoubtedly refers to the joint reign of Cleopatra and her son from Caesar that began about 42 B.C.<sup>(4)</sup>, and ended by the Roman supremacy.

Naturally this tablet is one of those that used to be put as deposits in building foundations <sup>(5)</sup>.

Monuments, pl. XXV. Here it is in its most shorter form Cf. BRUGSCH, ibid., p. 879. It is also distinguished by the second egg, the sign of divinity in the cartouche of Caesaron. The hieroglyph is written in an opposite way facing left while to be read from right.

<sup>(5)</sup> Cf. Objects nos. J. 60431, 60448 in the collection of Cairo Museum; MONTER, op. cit., fig. 33.
