AN AGREEMENT FOR SALE
FROM THE REIGN OF PTOLEMY IX SÔTER II
in the Museum of Mallawi ***

The group of seven papyri¹ in the Mallawi Museum discovered in Al-Kôm al-Ahmar Sawaris is probably all that survives of the archives of the priestly families who might have settled in the cemetery of the town of Hwt-nsw in the reign of the Ptolemies. They form a compact group dated from the end of the second century and the beginning of the first century B.C.².

The document published here for the first time is P. Mallawi inv. no. 602/7. It belongs to the period of the civil war between Cleopatra the Third (ruling with her son Ptolemy Alexander) and Ptolemy IX. It was acquired, like the rest of the collection, through the excavations conducted by the Egyptian Antiquities Organisation during the winter of 1976-1977³ in the necropolis of Al-Kôm al-Ahmar Sawaris, on the east bank of the Nile near Sharona in Middle Egypt. It was found in one of the subsidiary chambers of the Old Kingdom tomb of *G33/Mry*⁴.

This site is to be identified with the pharaonic centre of Hwt-nsw which was the metropolis of the XVIIIth nome of Upper Egypt (nty). Some ruins of the Old Kingdom necropolis are still extant on the spot, and remains of the Middle and New Kingdoms have also been found there. The necropolis was still used in the Late Period, down to the Graeco-Roman times. Blocks in the archaeological area are inscribed with the

* My best thanks are due to my colleague Dr. Michel Chauveau who has read through my manuscript, and made many useful suggestions and corrections which I have included here.

1. Six of them are demotic documents, the seventh (inv. n° 602/8) is a Greek "tax receipt", according to Pr. A. Hanafy (Ain Shams University) who will publish it.

2. On the collection, see my paper: "Find of Demotic Documents in El-Kôm el-Ahmar Sawâris-Sharona", in Proceedings of the XVIIIth International Congress of Papyrology

II, Athens, 1988, p. 137-139. In this paper the collection is referred to as the Mallawi Papyri of Sharona.

name of Ptolemy I Sôter and Ptolemy II Philadelphus⁵. The Mallawi papyri of Sharona now offer us glimpses of the community of the taricheuts of this town at the end of the ptolemaic period.

The name of the city, Hw.t-nsw, , which apparently means the “royal temple”, or the “residence of the king”, appears several times in our papyri⁶. The different graphies we encounter are :

Curiously enough, the only site name we found in our papyrus must be read Hw.t-nn-nsu : . It is the well-known name of the great city of Herakleopolis

Magna, the capital of the XXth nome of Upper Egypt⁹. However, it seems unlikely that our text made reference to this big centre, some 60 km away to the north. We must therefore postulate that there was some kind of confusion between the names of the two towns. Such a confusion was suspected by Gardiner¹⁰, with very good reasons, in a sentence of the famous “Petition of Peteêsi” (P. dem. Ryl. IX, col. 13, l. 6), a sentence which Griffiths translated so : “Four stipends is that which is given to the prophet of Hôr, lord of Hnês, and the prophet of Anûp, lord of Hartai”¹¹. As Gardiner pointed out, it is highly unlikely that Horus should have been the “Lord of Herakleopolis”, though his connection with Hw·t-nsw is well attested; we must then assume a scribal error and adopt the correction Hw·t-^{nn}-nsw. Such a confusion probably aroused here.

6. On the town, see LÄ III, col. 88 sq. It is noticeable that there are very few mentions of Hw.t-nsw in demotic documents except the Mallawi Pap.; cf. Chauveau, Enchoria 14, 1986, p. 29, n. 42.

Dealing essentially with necropolis matters, the papyri of Sharona reveal few features about the topography of the town. Our papyrus mentions  a Pr-Hw·t-Hr, “temple of Hathor”, close to the tomb which is the object of the contract. This name also occurs in the P. Mallawi inv. no. 602/10 : , where the court of justice is said to be sitting in Pr-Hw·t-Hr of *Hw·t-nsw*¹². Nevertheless we cannot be sure that this Pr-Hw·t-Hr, apparently included in Hw·t-nsw, is identical with the Pr-Hw·t-Hr nb·t ḥwy “House of Hathor mistress of the two altars”, which is a well-known temple to the south of the XVIIIth nome¹³. There were also at least two different cemeteries : one of them is named t3 ḥ3sy·t n t3 ḥy·t n ḥrš (?), “the necropolis of the shrine of the (funerary or religious) service (?)”, and the other is known as the northern (?) necropolis of Hw·t-nsw, but the relationship and the whereabouts of these two cemeteries are of course unknown.

The predominant people in these necropoles were the entaphiasts or taricheuts whose main Egyptian title, *ḥtmw-ntr*¹⁴, is mentioned many times in the demotic documents from Sharona :

Last, a word can be said about the divinities who were worshipped there according to our papyri. We have seen there were two occurrences of a Pr-Hwt-Hr, probably a temple dedicated to Hathor, at or very near Hwt-nsw. Besides, we encounter one single god who is labelled : “Horus son of Isis, lord of Hwt-nsw” in P. Mall. inv. no. 602/10¹⁶, and the onomastic data may confirm this fact : Horus is indeed included in most of the anthroponyms of our papyrus¹⁷ : Hr-pa-'Is-t, Hr, Hr-m-dr-t=f (r° 2), Hr-hy (?), Hr-Wn-nfr, *Hr-wd*³ (r° 3), Hr-'Iy-m-htp (v° 1), Hr-wr (v° 6), Hr-s³-'Is-t (v° 8). We can remark there is only one anthroponym composed with the name of the chacal-god Anubis (S³-'Inpw, v° 5) which was the main divinity of the very near religious centre of Hardāi (Cynopolis).

As for the resemblances between the demotic papyri of Sharona, one common feature worth to be noticed is the fact that the dating protocoles are notably short, and not always very accurate. Not only the names of the eponymous priests are omitted — which is indeed not surprising for this period — but also their titles. It is interesting to compare the ways the different scribes of these documents wrote their protocoles¹⁸ :

P. MALLAWI INV. No. 602/7

The present papyrus is of light brown colour and in good condition, with only slight breaks on the left side. It is split vertically and horizontally into three pieces, but it is clear that these join. The three pieces together measure 36 × 28.5 cm. That the papyrus was cut from a longer piece is shown by the edges on each side. The text is almost complete and well contrasted, but the hand is somewhat irregular and not very skilled, so the reading is sometimes difficult.

19. Cf. Zaghloul, OrAnt 25, 1986, p. 129. This important document will be published by Dr. Soad Sayed Abd el-Āl (Cairo University).

20. Cf. id., in Proceedings of the XVIIIth

International Congress of Papyrology II, Athens, 1988, p. 139, but the date given there must be corrected; cf. in the present issue Chauveau, « Un été 145 — post-scriptum ». p. 129 sq.

The text is a contract belonging to a type known in demotic studies as sh n db³-hd, “money document”²¹. It records a declaration made by a funerary priest named Hr-pa-'Is-t son of Dhwty-iw, together with his own son, Dhwty-iw (= party A), to another priest called Hr son of Hr-m-dr-t=f (= party B), concerning the sale of the stipends of a tomb located in the necropolis of Hw-t-nsu. On the back of the papyrus are the signatures of eight witnesses, preserved in whole or part, as usual.

COMMENTARY

(a) h̄s̄-t-sp 16 . . . R̄-kt : for this dating protocole, see in BIFAO 92, M. Chauveau, « Du nouveau sur le front . . . ». The document dates back to the 17th of January 101 B.C.

(b) [rm̄t] hr-ntr : this sequence is restored from the parallel in l. 2 infra :  ; it is here supplemented with a determinative  which is omitted in the other occurrence, the same sign being used also as a determinative for some personal names : Hr-hy (?), P̄s̄-htr (l. 3). This title is unknown to me, though Erichsen,

Dem. Gloss., p. 247 and 386, mentions the expression rmt hr ntr which he translates “Gottesangehöriger”. The sequence rmt hrt ntr is found also in P. Louvre E 3229, 2, 11 and 19. (Cf. J. Johnson, Enchoria 7, 1977, p. 60, 67 and 78), but it denotes there a dead man. Is there any connection with the title hr(t)-ntr, “stone-mason”, P. Ryl. IX, col. 18, l. 15-16 (Griffith, Cat. Dem. Pap. Ryl. III, p. 381), which may have denoted at first a category of employees in the necropolis (cf. Wb III, 394)?

(c)  htmw-h' = f-n-ntr : “sealer (i.e. “entaphiast” or “taricheut”) who attends to the god”, with a Middle-Egyptian construction of the relative after a non-defined antecedent. For the meaning of ‘h' n’, cf. Wb I, 218, 11; P. Vernus, RdE 30, 1978, p. 125; Crum, Copt. Dict., p. 537 a (ⲱⲉⲛ). This whole sequence as a title seems new to me, but the meaning must not be very different from the one of the more used htmw-ntr (as we found here in l. 2), or the htmw-ntr wyt known in the Hawara archive (see E. Reymond, Embalmer's Archives, p. 23-29). For the htmw-ntr, see G. Vittmann in LÄ VI, col. 232-236, s.v. “Taricheut”.

(d)  h3sy-t “necropolis” : for the writing, compare P. Mall. inv. no. 602/9, l. 3-4 (cf. Ola el-Aguizy, BIFAO 89, 1989, p. 93, n. c).

(e)  hy-t : for the reading, compare, P. Louvre 3266, 6 (Fr. de Cenival, BIFAO 71, 1971, p. 54); cf. also P. Erbach 1, 7 : ‘h'’. For the meaning, see P. Gallo, « A proposito del termine demotico ‘hy-t e dell’eventuale corrispondenza greca ἱβιῶν », EVO 9, 1986, p. 45-48; A. Egberts, Enchoria 15, 1987, p. 25 sq.

(f)  rš : if the reading is right, the word must be identified with ‘rš’, “Kultdienst”; cf. Erichsen, Dem. Gloss., p. 66.

(g) H[r-p3-T]s:t : the restitution is certain from the patronyme of his son on the same line.

(h) mi-nn : cf. P.W. Pestman, OMRO 44, p. 14.

(i)  htmw-ntr : the writing seems abnormal, ntr being usually anteposed to htmw. Further, there is an extra-sign between htmw and ntr. Is this intended to be a determinative like the one after rmt-hr-ntr at the preceding line, or is this the article p3 before ntr?

(j)  h3sy-t n pr-mh-t (?) “necropolis of the north (?)” : notice that the word h3sy-t has only the house-determinative here.

(k) Hwt-t-nn-nsw : for the reading and the identification with Hwt-t-nsw, cf. supra, p. 256.

(l)  $Hr-m-dr\cdot\dot{\iota}=f$: this is an unetymological writing of $Hr-nd-\dot{\iota}=f$; cf. J. Ray, The Archive of Hor, 1976, p. 75, n. a.

(m) $p^3 h\dot{d}$ is obviously omitted; it is probably a copist error aroused through a leap from the article of $h\dot{d}$ to the one of $s'nh$.

(n) $n Hr-wd^3$: the meaning of the preposition n is not clear here. It is unlikely that it could have been an error for s^3 , “son”. Probably it links the name with $p^3 \cdot wy$, Horudja being a further occupant of the tomb unrelated to the former. For the reading $Hr-wd^3$, compare P. Mall. inv. no. 602/10, l. 3 (cf. Ola el-Aguizy, BIFAO 88, 1988, p. 54).

(o) hr (?) $Pr-Hw\cdot t-Hr$: unhappily, the lacuna prevents us from knowing exactly where the tomb in question was situated in connection with this $Pr-Hw\cdot t-Hr$. The reading of the preceding sign  as hr is not quite obvious, but the article p^3 seems unlikely.

(p) $n^3y=w hmt\cdot\dot{\iota}\cdot w$: the $\dot{\iota}$ is superfluous, maybe the scribe had in mind the word $hrd\cdot\dot{\iota}\cdot w$ which appears many times in the next line.

(q) s^c : notice the very unusual presence of a determinative : .

(r) $r n^3y=k hrd\cdot\dot{\iota}\cdot w n\cdot m-s^3 n^3y=w hrd\cdot\dot{\iota}\cdot w$, etc. : the meaning is that the stipend sold is transmissible to the heirs who will inherit the same rights with respect to the children and the grand-children of the deceased ones who are actually in the tomb. A similarly constructed sentence occurs in P. Phil. 5, 9 (El-Amir, Family Archive, p. 23) : $iw n^3y=k hrd\cdot\dot{\iota}\cdot w n\cdot m-s^3 n^3y(=y) hrd\cdot\dot{\iota}\cdot w iw n^3 hrd\cdot\dot{\iota}\cdot w n n^3y=k hrd\cdot\dot{\iota}\cdot w n\cdot m-s^3 n^3 hrd\cdot\dot{\iota}\cdot w n n^3y(=y) hrd\cdot\dot{\iota}\cdot w$. On the inheritance rights of the children, cf. E. Seidl, Ptolemäische Rechtsgeschichte, p. 178 sq.

(s) $\dot{s}ty$: for the meaning and the Greek equivalents, cf. E. Reymond, op. cit., p. 31 sq. Notice it is here exceptionally in the singular.

(t) mh^3w : though the determinative  is not relevant, it is probably the word mh^3w “family” (Erichsen, Dem. Gloss., p. 171). If so, the remaining traces may suggest the restitution $m-[dr\cdot\dot{\iota} n^3y=]w mh^3w$, “(coming) from their familie(s)”.

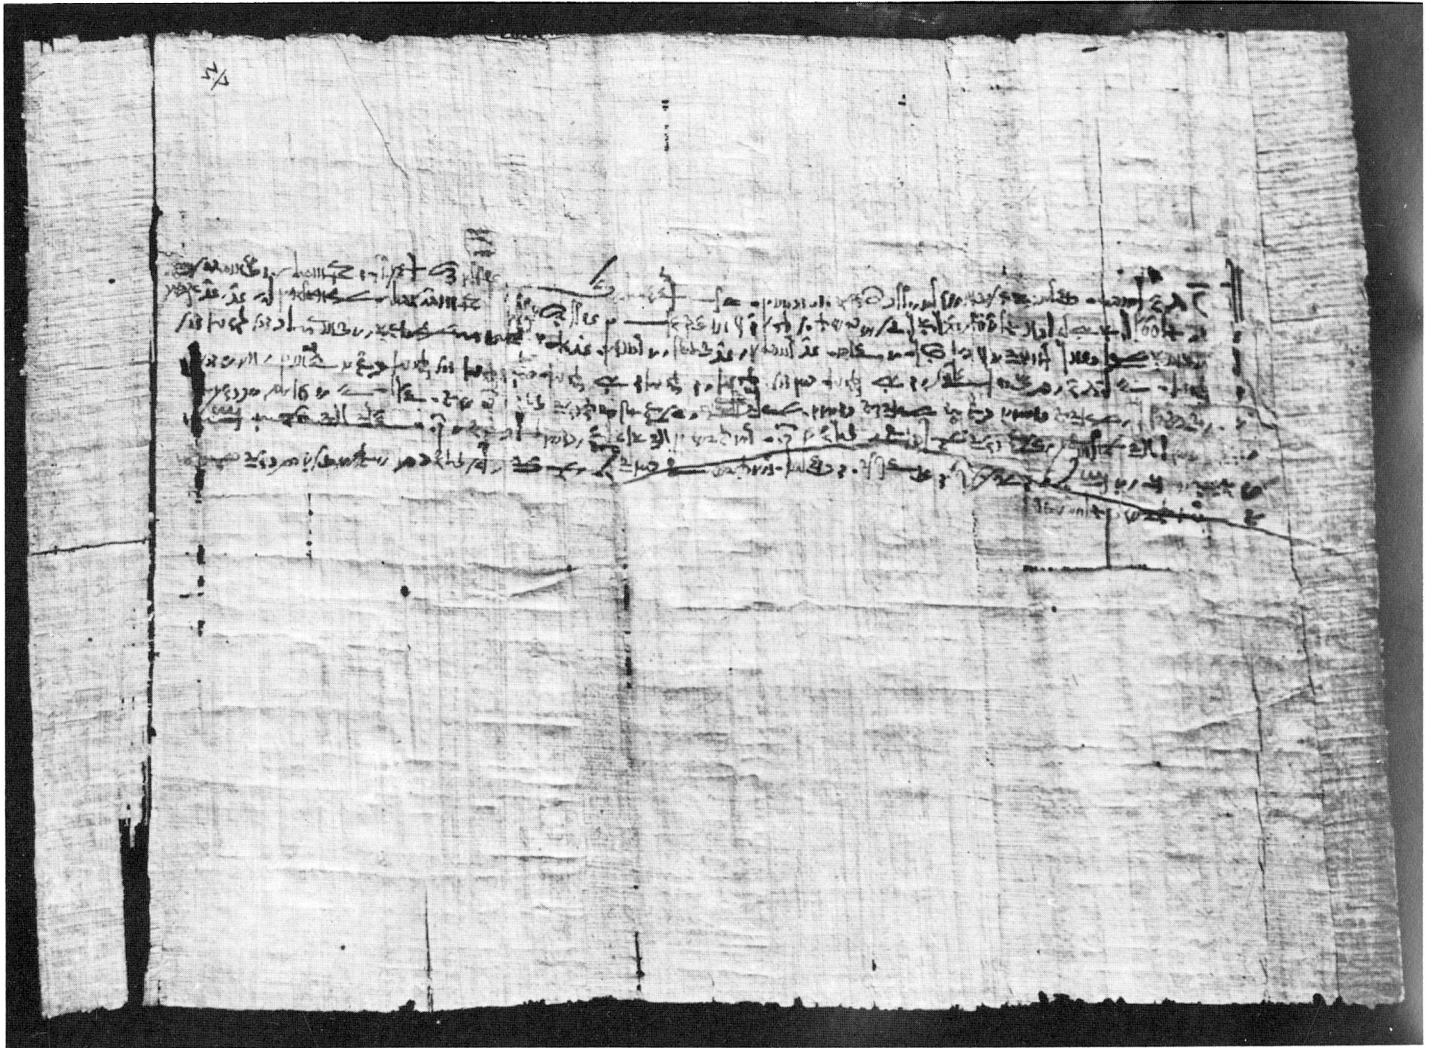

(u) Curiously enough the qualitative of wy is marked both by the reiteration of the initial w , and by a double (!) ending : $\cdot\dot{\iota}$ and $\cdot k(wy)$.

(v) $mi-nn$: for the use of $mi-nn$ with the meaning “likewise”, “as before”, see R. Jasnow, Enchoria 11, 1981, p. 28-30.

(w)  hr : read hl on which see Erichsen, Dem. Gloss., p. 395.

(x) $Pa-B^3st\cdot t$: the reading $B^3st\cdot t$ is not assured, because the writing is blotted; instead $Dhwty$ is also possible.

PAPYRUS MALLAWI. Inv. no. 602/7

Recto.

Handwritten text in Arabic script, likely a legal document or agreement, written on a double plate. The text is arranged in several lines, starting with a horizontal line above the first line. The script is cursive and appears to be from the Ptolemaic period.
