A Granite Statue Base of Hr-ir-'3 (Cairo N 9107)

AISHA M. ABDALAAL

T HE MONUMENT under discussion is a grey rectangular granite base, currently housed in the basement of the Cairo Egyptian Museum, the provenance of which is unknown. It belongs to the court official Hr-ir-'3, surnamed Nfr-ib-R'-nfr, known as the tutor of king Psammetichus II.¹

General Description

Registration Numbers: M 7273; N 9107 Dimensions: Length: 65 cm; Width: 35 cm; Height: 15 cm.

The base is rather well preserved. The statue which once stood upon it was removed out badly, causing some damage in the upper surface of the base. A hieroglyphic inscription is engraved around the base and on its upper surface, written between two framing lines, a feature well known for the sculpture of the 26th Dynasty. The style of the hieroglyphic signs and their shape are clear and delicate, as it is the case on most statues of the period.

Ayn Shams University – Cairo – Egypt. 1 These objects will be discussed in the following pages. For Hr-ir-'3 see D.A. PRESSL, Beamte und Solda ten. Die Verwaltung der 26. dynastie in Ägypten (664-525 v. Chr.), Frankfurt, 1998, p. 21-22, 203-207 (C2.1-8). As for king Psammetichus II, he is the third king of the 26th dynasty (595-589 B.C.). During his short reign many internal and external events happened, see A. SPALINGER, LÄ IV, 1982, col. 1170-2, s. v. "Psammetichus II"; Th. Upper Surface of the Base

Two horizontal lines, beginning from the right, occupy the surface of the base just in front of the removed statue. Most of the first line had been scratched off as a result of the process of removing the statue.

The honoured by the king of Upper and Lower Egypt Nfr-ib-R[•] [[the son of Re, Psammetichus]] may he live like Re. The overseer of the rwyt-administration Hor-ir-aa, whose beautiful name is Nfr-ib-R[•]-nfr, owner of honour.

- a. The s. R' name of the king $Psmtk^2$ has to be restored in this defaced area.
- b. The word rwyt appears at the end of Old Kingdom, as a new version for the old 'rryt,³ this term was connected with the official's titles but it has no clear and defined meaning. imy-r rwyt could have the meaning of "overseer of the approach to a building/approach area to temple precinct", and more likely "overseer of the gateway/entrance".⁴ K. Piehl in his article on another monument of Hr-ir-'2 translated this term as "the overseer of the warehouse".⁵ K. Jansen-Winkeln in his comment on this title⁶ refers to its connection with the police and judicial administration. The title was carried by some of the senior officials of the Late Period;⁷ it can be translated here as "the overseer of the administration", since the royal tutor has to be chosen among the administrative officials, who are well qualified to train the royal princes.⁸

2 Compare the king's protocol especially on Hr-ir-'5's monuments: R. EL-SAYED, "Quelques éclaircissements sur l'histoire de la XXVI^e dynastie d'après la statue du Caire CG 658", BIFAO 74, 1974, p. 29-44, pl.VI; K. - c. Commonly used masculine name during the Late Period.9
- d. Hor-ir-aa was contemporary with three kings of the 26th dynasty, Necho II (), Psammetichus II (), and Apries (). According to H. De Meulenaere, his "beautiful name" might have been Whm-ib-R'-nfr under the reign of Necho II; he changed it for Nfr-ib-R'-nfr under Psammetichus II, but, during the reign of Apries, he used only his main name without mentioning his rn nfr.^{II}

- f. This epithet refers, in my opinion, to the role played by the official during the offering of $M3^{c}t$ by the king in temples, probably responsible for carrying the divine figure of the goddess $M3^{c}t$. There are only eight cases known till now for non-royal individuals who hold and present a figure of the goddess $M3^{c}t$ in ancient Egyptian art.¹²

To sum up our comments, we can notice that the text mostly relies on Old and Middle Egyptian in writing as well as orthography, that the determinatives in most cases are omitted, that signs are replaced by others. All these features are characteristic of the Egyptian writing in the Late Period, ³⁷ more specially of the archaism, which prevailed in art, writing and language in the time of the Kushite and Saite Dynasties.³⁸

Provenance

The provenance of the base is questionable, one could assume that it comes from one of the numerous sanctuaries where Twenty-Sixth Dynasty material was found, for example Saïs, the dynastic chief city, or Memphis where Hr-ir-c has already left some monuments.³⁹

According to the above table, Hr-ir-'3 has seven statues discovered at various sites. Two of them represent the owner presenting a naos, one shows Hr-ir-'3 standing, another one kneeling with a space before his feet for the inscriptions like the base under consideration. Four of the six statues were certainly discovered in temples.

This statue quite certainly dates back to the reign of King Psammetichus II. As for the type of the statue, which once stood upon this base, one can conclude that, it is most probably a kneeling statue of Hr-ir-'3, holding a divine symbol⁴¹ or bearing a naos with a god or a god-dess figure, like Cairo CG 807 and Cairo CG 658 belonging to the same owner.⁴² According to the text inscribed on the base, it has been erected in a temple together with statues of King Psammetichus II. The text also explains how Horiraa, as a royal tutor, was respected and loved by this king.

41 A large number of the 26th Dynasty statues are shaped in this position even holding or not a divine symbol, e.g.: H. DE MEULENAERE, BIFAO 60, 1960, pls.XI-XIII; H. DE MEULENAERE, BIFAO 63, 1965, pl. 4; R. EL-SAYED, BIFAO 74, 1974, pls. VI-VII; R. EL-SAYED, BIFAO 77, 1977, pls. XVI-XVII; H. SATZINGER, *Das Kunsthistorische Museum in Wien.
