SOME VALUES OF PTOLEMAIC SIGNS ⁽¹⁾

BY

C. DE WIT

Having had the privilege of reading Ptolemaic Texts with Prof. H. W. Fairman, I had the opportunity of assessing the values of certain signs, which are not generally known.

I wish in this connection to express my gratitude to Prof. Fairman for having placed his large collection of slips at my disposal and for the help he has given in bringing the demonstration to a conclusion.

$$\text{.....} = m$$

In the lion-gargoyle texts, at Edfu, the name of the lion $t; m$ is written thus :

	E. IV, 117, 9
	IV, 354, 4; IV, 342, 12
	VII, 323, 5
	VI, 305, 6
	IV, 274, 4
	IV, 274, 6
⁽²⁾ 	VIII, 97, 16.

From these examples, it seems quite obvious that the value for the sign of the spitting mouth is m . I would at this stage already point out that the material shows the equivalence $\text{.....} = m$.

But it now remains to be seen how this value came to be accepted.

The vomiting mouth appears as a determinative in a number of verbs indicating the action « to spit, to vomit », etc. Here are a few examples :

	išš	« to spit ». E. IV, 77, 7
	bš	« to spit ». IV, 28, 12
	bst	« to vomit, come forth ». IV, 339, 3
	ntt	« to spit out ». IV, 21, 14
	k(:)ʿ	« to vomit ». III, 2, 7
	k(:)ʿ	« to vomit ». III, 95, 13; 170, 4-5
	k(:)ʿ	« to vomit ». IV, 29, 2
	kš	« to spit ». IV, 336, 8
	kjš	« to vomit ». III, 95, 13
	k(j)š	« to vomit ». III, 133, 2.
	fn	« to spit ». IV, 143, 9.
	pʿ	« to spit out ». II, 260, 12 = XII, pl. 414.
	pʿy	« to spit out ». Mag. P. Lond. Leid. 20/12.

As Grdseloff has pointed out in Archiv Orientalni, XX (1952), nos 1-2, p. 482, this last example gives us the origin of the value p for this sign, with which we are not now concerned.

Hence, the vomiting mouth is used as a general determinative of verbs indicating « pouring, flowing, etc. » :

	wḏh	« to pour out ». E. IV, 363, 11.
	wḏh	« to flow ». IV, 35, 15.
	pr	« to come forth ». P. Mag. Harris 501, 6, 12; 8, 5.
	št	« to pour out ». E. III, 90, 2.

	sti	« to pour out ». IV, 48, 11.
	kš (?)	« to stream » (?) VI, 88, 7.
	tf	« to pour out ». IV, 3, 4.
	tftf	« to drip ». III, 171, 17 (cf.  dfdf , IV, 386, 16-17).

The sign in question then serves as a determinative of nouns « spittle, vomit » :

	isd	« spittle ». E. IV, 21, 14.
	isd	« spittle ». III, 170, 3.
	«	« sweat, spittle ». IV, 32, 6.
	«	« sweat, spittle ». V, 13, 8.
	nhnh	« spittle ». V, 21, 1.
	<n?> nt	« spittle, sweat ». IV, 197, 7.

Because of these uses the vomiting mouth could act as a determinative of liquids in general, exudation, blood, and of verbs indicating « to drink » :

	idt	« odour, exudation ». D. IV, 70, 12. var. with  D. IV, 70, 10.
	inf	« fluid ». E. IV, 333, 12.
	inf	« fluid ». III, 154, 5.
	wtr (tvr)	« blood ». IV, 59, 2.
	pd	« burn incense ». IV, 99, 6.
	fdt	« exudation ». D. IV, 30, 6.
	fdt	« exudation ». E. V, 326, 17.
	m;^c	« Name of the mr (canal?) of the Theban nome ». E. IV, 175, 7.

	m ³	« id. ». IV, 175, 6.
	mint	« a kind of field (cf. GARDINER, Wilbour , II, p. 165 f.) ». D. IV, 56, 9.
	nw	« water ». E. VIII, 35, 6.
	snf	« blood ». IV, 91, 16.
	snf or wtr	« blood ». VI, 73, 9; VI, 83, 7.
	b ³ b ^c	« to drink ». VI, 77, 8.
	shb	« to drink » IV, 262, 15.
	mt	« seed ». V, 112, 5.
	mt (for m ³ t)	IV, 102, 5.
	mj	« seed ». IV, 178, 12.
	mt	« seed ». VI, 16, 4-5.

This last group is particularly interesting because it gives us the origin of alphabetic m. It is one of such words as my, mt, mw which must be the origin of the value m. It is this same history that enables  to replace ,  or  and leads on to the final development that  =  = iw.

We can now develop further consequences :

a) Because of the occurrence of the vomiting mouth as determinative of sti, mt, etc.  and  can replace each other :

	mw ntri	« divine seed ». E. V, 304, 7.
	mw ntri	« divine seed ». IV, 217, 6.

b) In all this section  is a) phon. mw or b) det. mw. Our examples show that  and  = mw :

	Hr hrj-ib mw.f	« Horus presiding over his water » E. V, 221, 1. (not mr , as WB. II, 97).
---	-----------------------	--

 ntr pfj hrj-ib mw-f « This god presiding over his water ». D. III, 190, 13.

 Idem. D. II, 177, 7.

 Idem. Mam. 204, 18.

c) Eventually, this leads to  = mw :

 in-~~iw~~ skd-n mw r-w-f « Have we not travelled over all the water? »⁽¹⁾. E. VI, 128, 5.

 mw n skd « waters of travel »⁽²⁾. VI, 128, 5-6.

 mj (mw) n skd « waters of travel »⁽²⁾. VI, 9, 4.

d) Finally the vomiting mouth  acquires the value iw, by simple replacement of  with which it has come to be equated⁽³⁾ :

 iw nsrsr « the Isle of Flame ». E. VII, 162, 8.
var.  (in parallel text). V, 84, 14.

 p; iw n t; swht « the Isle of the Egg ». IV, 140, 2.

var.  Idem. IV, 392, 16; VI, 339, 8-9.

 Idem. Mam. 23, 6-7.

 and  have come to be equated, I suspect, because  as det. « vomit » comes to replace all determinatives of verbs of spitting, pouring, ejaculation, etc., hence comes to act as determinative of liquids and exudations, and so inevitably can replace  and  and even  as determinative and as phonogram. This is the secret of the whole use of the sign.

⁽²⁾ JEA 21, 35.

⁽³⁾ The sign  can also be used for imn. In this connection, I wish to thank J. Leclant for having drawn my attention to the relation existing between Amon (the ram, in general) and water. Cf. WAINWRIGHT, JEA, XX (1934), 141-146; DRIOTON, ASAE, XLIV (1944), 147-148; FAIRMAN, BIFAO, 43, p. 119, n. 1; LECLANT, BIFAO, XLIX (1950), 206; LECLANT

DAVIES, The Temple of Hibis in el Khargeh Oasis, Part III (1953), pl. 33; SETHE, Amun, § 202.

As is well known, the vomiting mouth also represents the values p and pw⁽¹⁾. It also has the values tf and wtr (twr) or snf⁽²⁾.

Abusively, we find :

 ink t; rdwy « I am one hotfooted »⁽³⁾. E. IV, 274, 4.

 =

The word which WB. III, 37, 4 lists as :

 hjmj must be read : 'nh-imy; 'nh having been taken for h, owing to the similarity of these signs in hieratic.

⁽¹⁾  irp « wine ». E. VII, 8, 4.

 irp « wine ». III, 195, 8.

 H'p « inundation ». IV, 218, 16.

 H'p « inundation ». IV, 218, 14-16.

 H'p « inundation ». III, 2, 7.

st ntrwy pw nt Re hn Hr « It is the place-of-the two-gods, of Re and Horus ». I, 23, 8.

ir b'b-tu m wtr (snf) n s'bi-tu m k'st-sn « Drink ye the blood of your foes and of their females » VI, 77, 8 (JEA 29, 18).

ir-f b'b' m wtr (snf) n s'bi « He walloweth in (drinketh?) the blood of the foe » (JEA 30, 10, note a) E. VI, 83, 7.

stj-f wtr (twr) m inn n wtr « He pours out a river in the colour of blood ». E. VI, 83, 7-8 (JEA 30, 10, note c).

⁽³⁾ CdE 57, 43.

Philae Photograph 524 II (= E. VIII, 136, 8; cf. E. VI, 226, 15) shows the correct spelling :

 =     mh wd:t m 'nh-imy « Who fills the Sound Eye with 'nh-imy plant ».

In Edfu II, we find :

   'nh-imy II, 210, 2-3 = XII, pl. 391.

   'nh-imy II, 210, 6 = XII, pl. 391, but that h must be read 'nh is borne out by the following example :

    Fnd.f'nh (Osiris). I, 196, 11 = XI, pl. 283.

var.    Idem. E. I, 131, 14. (cf. WB. I, 578, 2).

The 'nh-imy plant is well known from the MK onwards (cf. WB. I, 203, 6-8) ⁽¹⁾.

 = h(?)yt

The double heaven-sign is to be read h(?)yt in the following :

     h(?)yt-sn nb 'pr m hbsw (= h;b;w-s). « All their ceilings ⁽²⁾ are equipped with the stars ». E. VII, 12, 3.

  hy « ceiling ». IV, 19, 13.

  hyt « heaven ». I, 543, 18.

The sign appears as a determinative either single or double in :

 hyt « heaven » (in : b; nb hyt; Bhdty nb hyt). VII, 147, 3; 162, 12.

 hyt « heaven » (in : h(?)yt n b;f). VIII, 93, 9.

 mnt « heaven ». IV, 3, 10; III, 238, 12.

⁽¹⁾ In the Rituel de l'Embaumement, recently edited anew by S. Sauneron, we find    'nh-imy (15,1, 19.8,11, 24,6 24,12 26, 11 30,5 32,1 35,11 43,5).

⁽²⁾ As H. W. Fairman has shown (in LECLANT, Rev. Eg. 8, p. 111, n. 2, the meaning of h(?)yt is « ceiling » not « roof ». In WB. II, 476, « Dach » should be amended to « Decke ». Leclant has discussed the further meanings of this word (Rev. Eg. 8, 101-120) and also Sir Alan H. GARDINER (On. I, 60-1*, II, 210-1*; JEA 34, 21, n. 2).

	imt	« heaven ». III, 238, 12.
	nww	« heaven, sky ». VIII, 93, 6.
	tw;yt	« the supported one = heaven ». VIII, 129, 16.
	smnt	« the stable one = heaven ». VIII, 129, 17.
	wst	« the uplifted one = heaven ». VIII, 130, 5.
	wst	« the uplifted one = heaven ». VIII, 130, 9.
	(?)	VIII, 92, 4.

 = (i)hr

In the building text in Edfu IV, 11, 5-6, we read :

i-n b3-f hnm-n-f hwt-nr-f hn-f hr (i)hr(?) f m St-Wrt-f

« His ba came, it united with his temple, it alighted on his image in his Great Place ».

Remembering the love of Ptolemaic scribes for alliteration, I thought that the unknown sign which obviously means image, must start with a h sound. Leaving away the weak i, such a word exists. It is (i)hr, listed by WB. I, 126 (= Theb. Tempel gr. Zeit 55 k; 89 c; Philae Phot. 885; Urk. VI, 65).

I therefore suggest (i)hr as a possible reading for this sign ⁽¹⁾.

 = rs

In E. IV, 131, 14, we read :

At first sight, one is inclined to think that a word has dropped out and to take the Nephthis sign as i 1st. pers. sign. fem.

This is however excluded, as it is a lion-god, who is speaking.

⁽¹⁾ In the Tomb of Rameses VI (PIANKOFF, p. 365, pl. 131), the snake is used as a word-sign for « Horus » (Hr). A reading hm is, of course, not excluded, as P. Derchain points out to me.

A parallel gargoyle-text, E. IV, 286, 15, gives us however the reading :

rs.i hr Wlst-nt-Ré-dr-b;h « I watch over the Wlst-of-Ré-of-former-days ⁽¹⁾ ».

Seeing our two texts are absolutely parallel, and knowing that it is one of the duties of Nephthys to « watch over » Osiris, we cannot escape the conclusion that our sign must here be read : rs.

It is also the alliteration which makes us read snm (and not the usual h; m) in the egret (?) catching fish.

E. IV, 130, 6 gives us :

(I am the great guardian, who leads forth the rainwater and casts [it] upon earth), « when the storm (snm) is dispelled, who swallows up (snm) the tempest of the day of thunder » ⁽²⁾.

Already in the New Kingdom, the sign appears as a determinative to snm (WB. IV, 164) and we know that it is quite a normal procedure for Ptolemaic scribes to take an old determinative for a word-sign.

Among other values (st being the commonest), the head of a jackal, with a loop, can read : sd.

So we have to read : E. I, 25, 10-12 :

sd.n.i t; sh.n.i dbt « I break the clay, I loosen the seal » ⁽³⁾.

⁽¹⁾ CdE 57, 39, n. 122.

⁽²⁾ CdE 57, 38.

⁽³⁾ ALLIOT, Culte d'Horus, 77, n. 6 : « J'ôte la terre sigillaire, je détache le cachet ».

The sign is used also in writings of hb-sd :

hwt hb-sd «The Heb-Sed Hall». E. V, 39, 2.

= mdwt

In the Myth of Horus at Edfu, appears a sign which resembles the abstract determinative, but seems to be crowned by a flower. Its meaning is certain : «at a distance of» (E. VI, 114, 7; 119, 2; 123, 10; 124, 1).

I believe it has to be transliterated mdwt (cf. WB, II, 184, 14), because = md;t :

gmh-n-f st hr rsj-i;bi n w;st n mdwt itrw 2 «Then he saw them to the south-east of Thebes at a distance of 2 schoinoi»⁽¹⁾. E. VI, 114, 7.

= b-ni:w

b-ni:w means «year» and in conjunction with hh is used in expressions indicating a million years.

L. Keimer, in Cahier n° 5, Supplément aux A. S. A. (1947), p. 11, has rightly put the word in relation with the ni:w animal (= bouquetin) and certain New Year vases. The horn of the animal is indeed covered with notches which resemble those of the sign for year.

b-ni:w hh is not to be translated «a million times»⁽²⁾.

Here are a few examples :

(i)r 'jt m hrw wpt-rnpt b-ni:w hh n(n);b «Who ascends to the roof on New Year's Day, a million years without cease» E. I. 569, 10.

⁽¹⁾ Cf. JEA 21, 30, note 1; ALLIOT, Culte d'Horus, II, 714, n. 6, discusses this and suggests transliteration of this passage m dmd

⁽²⁾ itrw 2.

⁽³⁾ ALLIOT, Culte d'Horus, I, 306, penultimate line.

hr itt 'b-ni;w hr hk; rnpwt(?) «Taking possession of year(s) and governing (regnal) years». E. IV, 93, 4.

'b-ni;w ir-n hnt hpt-rhyt nriw-k hnt 'nhyw «The million years which we have spent in Hpt-Rhyt are your periods at the head of the living». E. IV, 279, 9.

dd-k im m hh n hh n 'b-ni;w «You shall remain therein for millions and millions of years». E. VI, 18, 7-8.

'b-ni;w hh hr wbn htp hr m;; itn m st hb-tpj «millions of years, rising and setting, seeing the disk in the Place of the First Feast». E. I, 579, 11-12.

wnn hk;t h'-tj hnt iwnt dd-tj m hh n 'b-ni;w «The Princess has appeared gloriously in Dendera, being firmly established for millions of years»⁽¹⁾. D. II, 114, 17.

⁽¹⁾ Prof. Fairman points out to me that he has patiently been accumulating material on 'b-ni;w for over 10 years and is making a detailed survey of the writings and meanings of the different words for «year» e. g. 'b-ni;w, rnpt, h't-sp, nrît and a word h't(?) that does not figure in any dictionary or list.
